Education Dept. Audit Reported 2 Years Behind

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

BATON ROUGE — The State of Louisiana is two years behind on a complete audit of the department of education, whose $137-million budget— largest in the state—was approved on estimated figures.

An investigation conducted after the legislature adjourned confirmed reports that an education department audit hasn't been completed since 1955.

Already underfire because of alleged excessive surpluses, superintendent Shelby M. Jackson failed to submit information to the Department of Public Funds for an up to date audit, reliable sources said.

J. B. Lancaster, supervisor of Public Funds, said the education audit has not been completed because "all the necessary information hasn't been accumulated."

Officials were interviewed while Gov. Earl K. Long was signing the $384-million general appropriations bill into law and while a joint legislative committee prepared to launch a full scale investigation of Jackson's school lunch program.

Lancaster said an audit is now being made of the Department of Education — but confirmed the last audit was completed June 30, 1955.

Possible Reasons

He admitted the currect audit is two years behind and offered two possible reasons for the failure of Jackson's department to furnish him the proper information: 1. Lack of manpower, 2. Lack of space in Jackson's office.

Lancaster said the last complete audit made of the Education Department was for the period ending June 30, 1955. The current audit underway will cover the period from July 1, 1955 to June 30, 1957.

Nevertheless, the Education Department's budget — largest in the state at $137,765,826 — for fiscal year 1958-59 was approved on estimates made by Jackson, even though the last audit of his department covered fiscal year 1954-55.

Lancaster's department has been unable to bring the education audit up to date because of a lack of all necessary informa-

Fireman Saves Runaway Boat In Fla. Waters

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—A motorboat dumped its pilot into Hillsborough Bay Saturday, plowed into another boat, scattered swimmers and waterskiers and ran in crazy circles for 30 minutes before a fireman leaped aboard and stopped it.

Bill Throneberry told Patrolman George Mansfield he apparently hit a wave and the 16-foot outboard tossed him into the seaplane anchorage near Peter O. Knight Airport.

While Throneberry recruited aid for a nautical pursuit, the boat slammed into the side of an outboard operated by Billy Manders.

Manders had stopped to pick up a dunked skier, Mrs. Jacqueline Wilbur, when he saw the runaway ran over him.

Meanwhile, Throneberry was pursuing his runaway boat in another vessel. Onlookers had called police.

"We tried to stop it," he said, "but it was running like a wild horse—all over the basin."

He said the 35 horsepower motor was running at about half speed.

Resignation Of Adams Is Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Detroit News reported Saturday presidential assistant Sherman Adams will resign during the Labor Day weekend.

News Washington Correspondent Robert S. Ball said he received the "inside" information from unidentified top-ranking Republican sources who told him the "assistant president had outlived his usefulness."

Ball said Adams, because of disclosures of his association with Boston gift-giver Bernard Goldfine, was looking for a graceful exit from the White House.

The copyrighted article said:

"The whole question is one of timing—in an election year.

"To quit while the Democratic-controlled House influence-investigating committee is pursuing its exposure of the gift-giving millionaire would be unthinkable, White House advisers agree.

"They said it would be an admission of conduct worse than the 'imprudence' Adams confessed to June 17 and which President Eisenhower confirmed at a press conference the next day."

Solon Accuses Jackson Of 'Squandering'

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP)—Rep. Lolyd Teekell said Saturday that Supt. of Education Shelby M. Jackson "squandered" some five million dollars in school lunch surplus funds.

While there was nothing criminally dishonest, Teekell said, about Jackson, "he's a big spender with other people's money."

The Alexandria attorney said the State Department of Education is one in which there is utmost need for administration by "an economical man." He said one of Jackson's faults is that "he spends a big lot of money publicizing himself."

Teekell said if the Department of Education had been under budgetary control, Jackson would not have been allowed "to squander that money."

Show Public

The 1958 Legislature placed the department's finances under control of the Division of Administration, and named a special committee to investigate the lunch-fund surplus. Teekell said he believed the committee would show the public what money is being spent and where and indicate how the funds could be handled more effectively.

"The state has only so much money for education, and the more Jackson grinds out for other purposes, the less we have for the teachers and for other essentials," Teekell said.

The Rapides Parish representative predicted a special session of the Legislature in October or earlier and said he thought supplementary pay for policemen as well as teachers salaries would be provided at that time.

"It just seems that the average legislator down there waited for miracles to happen and didn't have the guts to vote taxes," he said. "I think it is now obvious to everyone that the state finances are very low and we must get additional revnue in order to pay both policemen and teachers."

Two Men Killed In Plane Crash

GREENVILLE, Miss. (AP)—A two-engine plane owned by an Oklahoma oil company crashed about five miles north of here Saturday, killing both men aboard.

The Phillips 66 Petroleum Co. headquarters at Bartlesville, Okla., identified the victims as Roy Dickson, the pilot, and Stanley Anderson, co-pilot, both of Bartlesville.

Sheriff Malcolm James of Washington County said there was no sign of fire—"the plane just seemed to come apart." He said there was a thunderstorm in the area at the time of the crash.

James said the plane's wreckage was scattered in a bean field along a two-mile stretch off Highway 61.

2 Mandeville Marshals Shot Dead By Negro

'They Shot Me First', Slayer Tells Officers

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Two Mandeville town marshals called to settle a dispute at a Negro bar were blasted to death with a shotgun at 3:30 a.m. Saturday.

Five hours later, a suspicious policeman arrested their admitted slayer, Moreese Bickham, just outside Baton Rouge, 60 miles away.

"They shot me first and I killed them," the 41-year-old Negro told police as he was given emergency treatment at Baton Rouge General Hospital.

Officers removed Bickham to jail after treatment where a bullet glanced off his rib. The five foot, eight inch, 175 pound carpenter received a slight flesh wound, but the bullet left holes entering and leaving and officers first thought he was shot twice.

Bizarre Tale

Bickham told officers a bizarre tale in which a Sorrento town marshal gave the Negro a lift to a bus station, then discovered a stolen car a few hours later abandoned with two shotguns.

The story began when Marshal Gus Gill, 70, and his 71-year-old assistant, Jack Galloway, answered a call to a bar just outside Mandeville.

Mandeville is a resort town located on the north shore of Lake Pontchartrain.

Bickham said the officers ordered him to drop his shotgun. Instead, he ducked into some weeds.

The officer with "the shiny pistol" opened fire, wounding Bickham. Bickham said he shot one of the officers with his shotgun.

The other officer ran to the car to get a shotgun.

"I got out of the weeds and walked toward him and when I was about 15 feet away I shot him," Bickham said.

He said he took the wallet from the pocket of the first officer, finding two dollars and some change. He also took the police model .38 revolver from the two men.

"I pushed the policeman from the seat of the car and got in it and started off," Bickham told officers.

About four hours later, a wom-

Shutdown Of Many State Fairs Seen

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Agriculture Commissioner S. J. McCrory predicted Saturday "a good many" of Louisiana's state fairs and festivals will not be able to operate without state aid.

Gov. Earl Long Friday vetoed a $300,000 appropriation for fairs and festivals.

The Senate Finance Committee —with the government flatly refusing to okay any bills taking cash from the state general fund —raided a bill reappropriating $300,000 set aside in 1956 for beach erosion control at Grand Isle.

In his veto, Long said the Legislature, "in its desire to finance fairs and festivals, has let its anxiety get away with its better judgment.

"This project, which is already underway, is of vital importance to all the people of Louisiana" the governor said.

"I deeply regret that the governor was compelled to veto this fair bill because fairs and festivals have been such an inspiration in our agriculture," McCrory said.

"I'm sure that a good many of them probably won't be able to operate without that assistance," he added. "By the same token, I feel a good many will continue to operate through local participation."

He said the cash grants, ranging from $1,000 to $50,000, were used for premiums and prizes.

Sen. B. B. Rayburn of Bogalusa, senate finance chairman, commented, "State help with the fairs and festivals has been in operation for many years. It's something the people are accustomed to. They have relied upon it to operate. It's hard to tell what the reaction will be."

The bill called for the Agriculture Department to distribute the funds to 47 fairs and festivals.

Weather In Nation Is On Rampage

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Heavy rains accompanied by deadly lightning drenched the New York City area Saturday night, dumping 1.4 inches of mid-summer deluge on the metropolis in an hour while electrical storms, wind, hail and floodwater, mixed with the threat of tornadoes, buffeted the nation elsewhere.

At least eight persons were killed Saturday in weather-caused mishaps, six of them victims of lightning bolts. Two others, Mrs. Halpina Reuther, 18, and George Weimer, 20, were electrocuted when they stepped from a car onto a high - tension wire in Smithtown, N.Y.

Other Victims

The other victims included an Illinois couple and Florida friend, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Davidson, both 24, of Cairo, and Robert Hase, 29, Tampa, who were killed by a lightning bolt on the Clearwater, Fla., beach, and three boys who were struck by lightning in New York City while seeking shelter under a tree.

Elsewhere, the U. S. Weather Bureau reported funnel clouds had touched ground Saturday night in central Indiana and apby a lightning bolt on the Clearwater, Fla., beach, and three boys who were struck by lightning in New York City while seeking shelter under a tree.

Elsewhere, the U. S. Weather Bureau reported funnel clouds had touched ground Saturday night in central Indiana and appeared close to ground near Williston, N. D. Tornado warnings were up for both areas.

Other warnings for severe thunderstorms and possible tornadoes were issued earlier for south-central Kansas and parts of north-central and northeastern Oklahoma.

Thunderstorms ripped through large areas from the Rockies to the Appalachians, skipped across parts of Illinois and blocked streets and highways in Kansas.

Heavy hail pounded Fayetteville, Ark., and hailstones the size of golf balls battered Liboral, Kan., in a 15 - minute weather holocaust there. Fayetteville Police Sgt. R. F. Jackson said his community had been hit by "just plain ice, and lots of it."

Lebanese Rebs Blow Up Big Power Station

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Heavy fighting erupted in Tripoli Saturday after rebels blew up a big electric power station and dynamited the water main supplying the port district.

It climaxed 48 hours of the worst outbreak of shooting and violence in that northern port city since the rebellion broke out 64 days ago.

There was speculation in this capital that the outbreak might be the opening gun for a rebel offensive, long expected here. But there have been many false alarms before.

A rebel spokesman told The Associated Press Tripoli's Nahr el Bared power station—which feeds power to Beirut in peak periods—was blown up Friday. Informed sources in Beirut estimated damage to the electric power station at more than two million dollars.

Gets Hotter

After a relatively calm morning, shooting broke out again in Tripoli Saturday afternoon. The rebel spokesman said by telephone the shooting was getting hotter.

The rebels also claimed they had blown up a four-story building used by security forces as an observation post in Tripoli.

Despite heavy shooting and widespread violence, the casualties reported were relatively light. Rebels reported 8 killed and 26 wounded on their side. Security forces did not give their losses.

Tripoli rebel leader Rashid Karami, former premier, narrowly escaped death Friday when security forces shelled the building in which he is living temporarily. He had left the house only five minutes earlier. Most of the house was destroyed.

Union Plants Favor Strikes

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers Union said Sunday that its members at Big Three plants so far have voted 93.5 per cent in favor of authorizing strike action if necessary to win contract demands.

The union will resume negotiations with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler Monday following a nine-day recess.

With 168 out of 220 locals reporting, the total vote stood at 175,972 in favor of strike action and 12,129 against, the union said.

UAW leaders expect to complete the strike votes at all Big Three locals later this month.

The UAW meanwhile made public a letter it sent Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain (R-Mich) asking him to intercede with General Motors Corp. in behalf of a union proposal for a poll of GM workers on the kind of a labor contract they prefer.

WOMAN KILLED

Ex-Miner Shoots Up Idaho Tavern

SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP) — An elderly ex-miner who claimed he was short-changed for a beer flew into a rage Friday night, went home for a pistol and came back to shoot up the tavern.

Police said Emil Olkonen, 74, killed Mrs. Ruby Tanner, 66, as she sat at the bar; shot point blank at the bartender, hitting him in the neck; fired at and winged a fleeing customer, then shot twice at his own wife.

Olkonen, his pistol empty, walked out the door and drove three blocks home. The tavern was in an uproar after about 10 customers, almost too stunned to move, at first, realized what happened. Police arrived and called for reinforcements from as far as 80 miles away.

Use Loud Speaker

The berserk gunman had holed up in his modest frame home and put away the pistol for a rifle. Police surrounded the place in the dark and used a loudspeaker to call for his surrender. Just then, a car drove up and the headlights made a perfect target of Police Chief George F. Elliott, 30.

Olkonen fired twice, the first bullet bouncing off the ground and striking Elliott in the chest and leg.

With the neighborhood terrified, officers opened up and fired some 300 shots at intervals for the next three hours. It developed they were shooting all along at a dead man. Olkonen's second shot long before was suicide.

Police said Olkonen went into the City Club tavern, ordered a beer and got change for a dollar. He argued he gave the bartender, Robert Hunter, $5. Mrs. Tanner, Hunter's mother, finally took change for $5 from her purse,

To Offer No Ransom For 9 Held By Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Saturday held open the door to a reasonable deal with the Soviet Union and East Germany for the release of nine U.S. airmen held in East Germany since early last month.

But State Department officials said the U.S. government has no intention of ransoming the men with virtual recognition of East Germany. That is what the East Germans and the Russians are seeking.

The price is far too high, in the State Department's view, because if paid it would not only hurt U.S. prestige but upset American relations with West Germany and possibly endanger the vitally important position of the Western powers in Berlin.

May Disrupt Relations

Such considerations make it certain that if the Reds do not back down, the dispute over the nine men will be prolonged and increasingly bitter and may cause a general worsening of U.S.-Soviet relations.

Moscow was put on notice late Friday that the United States fears the dispute will grow into a first class row. At the same time, Washington said it is ready to meet any "normal and reasonable requirements" which the Reds may specify for having the men returned to West Germany. They fell into Communist hands June 7 when their helicopter lost its way during a thunderstorm.

U.S. views on the issue were given to Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov by Deputy Under Secretary of State Robert Murphy late Friday.

Envoy From China Beaten By N.Y. Thugs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three thugs beat and robbed a Chinese diplomat in midtown Manhattan early today in the third assault on a member of a foreign United Nations mission here in less than 10 months.

H. Cheng, 33, first secretary of the Chinese Nationalist U. N. delegation, saw a friend off at a bus terminal and then walked toward his car, which was parked nearby.

Thugs Grabbed Him

Three thugs grabbed him, Cheng told police.

"Shut up and you won't get hurt," one of them told him.

The men took Cheng's $150 wrist watch and his wallet, which contained $20. Then they fled.

A policeman saw the trio run to a cab. He had just begun to question them when Cheng ran up and said the men had just robbed him. The three were arrested for assault and robbery.

Cheng was not hurt, as were the two previous U. N. attache attack victims. Rishikish Shaha, 33, Nepal's ambassador to the U. N. was stabbed and robbed in Central Park Sept. 17. Mrs. Odile Niessel Villars, 28, secretary to the French U. N. envoy, was stabbed and robbed in Central Park.

In a fourth incident May 10, Frieda Abdoh, 16, daughter of Iran's permanent representative to the United Nations, was stabbed in Bronx Park while out for a walk. Her father, Dr. Djalal Abdoh, was waiting for her in a restaurant.

Two Negro Tots Fatally Burned In Tallulah Area

Three - year - old John Earle Moore, Negro of Tallulah, died yesterday in Conway Memorial Hospital of burns suffered when a tenant farm burned to the ground. His one-year-old sister died in the blaze.

Tallulah firemen were called to battle the flames, which enveloped a tenant house 15 miles south of Tallulah, at 10:15 Friday night.

When they arrived, the house was a mass of fire.

Verline Moore, one-year-old daughter of Pearl Moore, died in the fire. The mother received minor burns, and the three-year-old boy was burned over 60 per cent of the body.

He was rushed to Monroe, arriving at the hospital here at midnight. He succumbed from shock due to the burns, at 9:45 yesterday morning.

Late yesterday, cause of the fire was still undetermined. The house was located on the John Olvey place.

MAIL DEPOSIT ENVELOPES

Girl Stole Money To Help Pay Bills

MIAMI (UPI) — A frightened teenage girl bank messenger said Saturday she stole money from mail deposit envelopes to help pay family bills.

Bank officials estimated the girl, Peggy Sue Hipps, 18, threw away some $100,000 worth of checks involving scores of bank accounts when she rifled the envelopes for cash several times in the past four months.

"I thought mama and daddy needed the money," the slender blonde girl sobbed. "That's why I took it."

Peggy Sue pleaded guilty to three federal misdemeanor charges Thursday and faces sentencing after an investigation.

Authorities said she was the chief means of support for a family of seven. The girl's mother, Vera Hipps, 37, works at a meat packing plant for $50 a week, but has been ill recently.

The father, Gordon, 42, said he has been unable to hold a steady job because he went AWOL from the Army during World War II and served a five - year prison term.

The missing mail deposit envelopes started an intensive investigation during which postal inspectors and FBI agents kept a close watch on all employes of the Post Office, an armored car service and the bank, who had any contact with the mail deposits.

They almost overlooked the slim girl as she went about her messenger duties at the bank.

But attention was centered on Peggy Sue after a missing envelope was found hidden in a broom closet and missing checks were found in a search of a huge city rubbish dump.

Peggy Sue said her thefts amounted to $82 cash. She was caught before she could remove $113 from three deposit envelopes taken last Wednesday.

TO PRESERVE STATE LAND

Menefee Places Policy On Line

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

BATON ROUGE — J. M. Menefee looked at home in his new office over-looking the monument of Huey Long, puffed on a cigarette and vowed he'll never sell a single acre of state - owned land.

Pete Menefee, as he is known in Monroe as a former oil and gas businessman, announced his policy 48 hours after assuming the office of register of state land office.

He declared, "The state doesn't have but between 2,000 and 3,000 acres of land left. I won't be a party of diminishing any of that."

For a man of 53 who had retired, Menefee still appeared puzzled over his decision to accept the new position. In fact, the expression on his face was much the same as that Tuesday when he sat perplexed outside the upper chamber while the Senate voted in favor of the governor's appointment.

But regardless of whether he wanted it, he gave indications that he has made up his mind to do the job, a position which is synonymous in Louisiana politics with the name of Lucille Mae Grace.

"My main objective," Menefee said, "is to make personal surveys and evaluations of all lands owned by the state of Louisiana."

Once Massive

He said the once massive amount of land owned by Louisiana, excluding the tidelands, has dwindled through the years of various administrations.

To meet his objective, Menefee will have to call on all the facilities of his years.

As a native of Homer, he moved to Monroe in 1932 and was in business there until 1955. He never once held a public office in Ouachita parish, but showed an interest in civic affairs by serving on several committees.

When Mayor John Coon appointed a committee of several men in Monroe to draft plans for the Utilities Commission, Pete Menefee was appointed. He also served on the fireman's and police civil service board.

In 1956, after taking an active part in Gov. Earl K. Long's race in the Monroe area, Menefee was named chairman of the state racing commission.

His appointment to the land office came over his own protests. He said prior to being sworn in, "I don't know either whether I want it or not."

Nevertheless, Menefee's own desires were overridden by Long and the senate and Wednesday morning he was sworn in to replace Fred C. Dent Sr., husband of the late Lucille Mae Grace.

Inside the sixth floor land offices, where Menefee will supervise a staff of 20 persons, records of every piece of property in Louisiana dates back to the birth of the state.

Menefee will move from Monroe to Baton Rouge to watch over the state's records and stand vigilant over Louisiana land.

Trouble Hits Missile Test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI)—The Air Force tried to fire a full three - engine Atlas intercontinental missile today but called it off with seconds to go when unexplained trouble developed.

Earlier in the day a Thor missile was fired successfully. Also today, the search was called off for a white mouse that was sent aoft Wednesday in the nose cone of a Thor intermediate range missile.

The Atlas was equipped for the first time with the three engines capable of hurling it full intercontinental range of 5,500 (nautical) miles. In the previous eight test flights only two engines were used.

Charge Filed After Wreck Injuring 3

A Swartz man has been charged by State Police with improper parking, after three men were injured in a wreck five miles east of Monroe, on Highway 80.

Frank Smith was charged, after a car driven by Earl Dickens, 22, of Rayville, slammed into the back of the Smith car.

Police said Smith was parked on the highway, without lights, and the headlights of an oncoming car blinded Dickens so that he did not see the parked vehicle, in the east-bound lane.

Dickens and two passengers, Paul Ravenscraft, 20, with the 366 Consolidated Maintance Sqdn., England Air Force Base, Alexandria, and Bobby L. Harmon, 23, of the 622 Air Refueling Sqdn., England A.F.B. were injured in the mishap around midnight Friday.

All three men were rushed to St. Francis hospital, where Dickens was X-rayed, treated for an injury to the right arm, and released.

Ravenscraft suffered a head injury, was hospitalized overnight, and was released yesterday.

Harmon, who received a chest injury and abrasions on the legs, was treated and released.

Dickens, who works at a Monroe grocery store, was on his way home and was giving a ride to the two service men when the mishap occurred. The front of his car was smashed in and the back of the Smith vehicle was extensively damaged.

Shelton Freeman, 18, of Route 3, Box 326, Monroe, stated that he was attempting to replace a muffler in the car when the crash occurred. He said that four other young men were there, in addition to Smith.

All were outside the car at the time of the crash, and none was injured.

Negro Worker Shoots Man In Head At B.R.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — City police said Saturday a 51-year-old Negro handyman fired a shotgun blast into the head of a man he thought was going to burn down his house.

Joe Williams was reported in critical condition at Baton Rouge General Hospital.

Sheriff's deputies picked up Joseph H. Bright a few minutes after the shooting on the Mississippi River levee near the municipal docks.

Bright told officers a small boy told him Williams said he was going to burn down Bright's house "if it's the last thing I ever do."

Bright lived in a small shack between the levee and the river.

He said he found Williams in the weeds behind his home. Bright said he opened fire at close range when Williams refused to say why he was there.

Deputies found the shotgun under the mattress at Bright's house.

White House Joins Solons To Draft Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House joined actively Saturday in attempts by Senate military experts to draft a generally acceptable compromise on President Eisenhower's defense reorganization plan.

Presidential assistant Bryce N. Harlow, White House reorganization expert, paid weekend visits to Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex) and Chairman Styles Bridges (N H) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee. Both are high - ranking members of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) scheduled a closed-door meeting of the committee Tuesday to begin drafting a Senate version of the bill. He was reported to be working on alternative language for two of the President's points.

Sen. Leverett M. Saltonstall (R-Mass), top - ranking GOP committee member, said he was "very hopeful" a mutually satisfactory bill would be hammered out quickly.

Saltonstall and Bridges also were reported to have drafted substitute language aimed at the President's objections to the House picture:

On the President's request for a change in Houses-drafted language requiring in Army, Navy and Air Force separately organized and controlled through their own service secretaries: It appeared likely that new language will be written acceptable to the president.

On the President's request that Congress junk the present provision which lets individual members of the joint chiefs of staff take dissents to Congress on their own initiative: It seemed unlikely that the Senate committee would do more than perhaps redraft the proviso to make it more palatable.

On the President's request for broader authority to change or abolish functions assigned to the Army, Navy and Air Force: The committee seemed likely to make some modifications in the House bill but perhaps not to the extent favored by the President.

Integration Hearing Set

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — U.S. District Judge J. Skelly Wright will hold a hearing Aug. 6 on the Orleans Parish School Board's motion for a rehearing on a move to dismiss a suit to integrate public schools.

Judge Wright denied a school board motion to dismiss the suit July 2 when he held that a 1956 state segregation law was unconstitutional. The act provided for a legislative committee to classify schools for either whites or Negroes.

The judge said the board's original motion was merely a move to circumvent his 1956 rule which declared the state act unconstitutional and ordered the board to integrate "with all deliberate speed."

Shah Takes Quick Trip To Riviera

CANNES, France (UPI) — The Shah of Iran unexpectedly flew to the French Riviera Saturday less than 24 hours before his divorce from beautiful Queen Soraya becomes final.

The sudden trip followed reports circulating in Cologne, Germany, that the Queen would meet the Shah here for a possible reconciliation.

Despite efforts by officials close to the couple to discourage the reports, the Shah's flight here spurred speculation.

The flight obviously was hastily planned.

Soraya was reported still in Cologne, where her father lives as the Iranian ambassador to West Germany.

Under Moslem law, the Shah has 100 days in which to reunite with his wife without complications. He divorced her by mere decree. The 100 days is up at midnight Sunday.

A spokesman for the Iranian embassy in Cologne said it was "simply unthinkable" the Shah would go to Cologne after his recent statement in the United States that he must think of his country before himself.

The Shah divorced Soraya because she had failed to bear him any children in their seven years of marriage. In order to keep the throne in the family, the Shah must have a male heir.

Miss. State House Has Anniversary

JACKSON, Miss. AP)—Mississippi's State House, known familiarly as the "New Million-Dollar Capitol," marks its 55th anniversary this month as the seat of state government.

Built on the site of the state penitentiary in 1901-03 for $1,093,641, the Capitol houses the governor's offices, legislative halls and committee rooms, Supreme Court and offices, attorney general's offices, state library and other functions of government.

The state's official and statistical register describes the Capitol as "architecturally speaking, the most important and the most prominent public building in the South. It far surpasses in beauty, if not in size, all the Capitol buildings in the Southern states.

Its size is impressive. The buildings stand four stories high, 402 feet long and 255 feet wide. Height of the dome is 180 feet above level of the main entrance. Site of the capitol is a two-block rectangle totaling 750 square feet.

Officially, Mississippi describes the Capitol:

"The style adopted is a pure Renaissance classic of a dignity and elegance of proportion which fittingly expresses the power, honor and stability of the state.

"It is designed on the order of pavillions connected by wings with a view to giving architectural prominence and expression to its fundamental purpose . . . in a very simple, straightforward and direct manner."

The hundreds of visitors who pass through the building each month are struck first by the immensity of the structure and then by the multitude of lights that adorn the rotunda.

Officially, there are 4,750 electric lights in the building, 750 of them in the rotunda. Hundreds more decorate the Senate and House chambers.

Atop the dome is a spread-wing eagle-facing south, the building's front-coated with gold leaf. The eagle measures 15 feet from wingtip to wingtip and stands eight feet high. It cost $1,500.

The so-called new Capitol is the last of many state houses during Mississippi's 160-year-old history as a territory and state.

Natchez was the first seat of government, established when Mississippi became a territory in 1798. In 1802, the seat was moved to nearby Washington.

When Mississippi became a state in 1817, the seat of government was changed to Natchez but because of the prevalence of yellow fever there, it remained actually in Washington.

In 1822, Jackson was founded as the seat of government and the first state house was erected at Capitol and President streets, now the site of a furniture company.

A small brick building, this state house was in use 15 years.

In 1839, a new capitol was erected on the bluff overlooking Capitol Street, the main business street, one block from the original state house.

The newer building, now known as the Old Capitol, remained in almost continuous use for 119 years. Plans are under way now for renovating the building to as near its original condition as possible for use as a state museum.

Sack Is Big Fall Fashion Question Now

NEW YORK (UPI)—The big question in fall fashions is—will the designers sack the sack?

We all start learning the answers next week, when leading New York stylists unveil their fall and winter collections for 200 women's and fashion editors from the United States and Canada.

The occasion is the semi-annual fashion press week staged each January (to show spring and summer clothes) and July (for fall and winter) by the 30-member couture group of the New York Dress Institute.

Lists 'Name' Designers

The group includes such "name" designers as Mollie Parnis, who does many of the daytime costumes for Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower; Ceil Chapman, who is most famous for her glamour gowns; the French-born Pauline Trigere who pays no mind to fashion dictates from her homeland; Oleg Cassini, who preaches that the feminine figure should always be on display even if the rest of the world goes overboard for the shapeless look; and Yves St. Laurent, successor to the late Christian Dior, whose firm each season puts out a New York and Paris collection.

Some familiar names in the design world will be missing. Both Claire McCardell and Maurice Rentner have died since the last press week, although their firms will go on. And Nettie Rosenstein, designer of Mrs. Eisenhower's two inaugural ball gowns, didn't make a fall collection.

Preview Of Fall

The week-long schedule actually will give the reporters a look at fall style from head to heel. For 15 auxiliary and associate members of the institute will show furs, millinery, shoes and other accessories, cosmetics and hair styles.

Predictions of things to come already have circulated, and some reporters have scouted the New York markets to report their findings.

Women's Wear Daily, the trade publication, for instance, foresees the continuation of the easy-fitting silhouette, with the revival of the Empire, or high under the bosom, waistline.

And at its recent preview, the fashion group of New York predicted:

"We women will regain our bosoms; our waistlines will remain loose . . . and there are few of those clothes which hobble the derriere."

Cutworms Cause Serious Damage To Late Crops

JONESVILLE, La. (Special) — Cutworms are causing serious damage to late planted crops in sections of Catahoula Parish that was flooded this spring according to E. E. Johnson, Catahoula Parish County Agent.

The worm usually attacks young crops of corn, soybeans, milo and cotton just as these crops are coming up the small plants are usually cut off about ground level and the top portion is consumed. Cutworm damage was detected in several sections by Johnson, with some stands being badly damaged.

The outbreak of the insects pose a serious threat to the late planted crops. Crops that are destroyed this late in the season will usually mean a complete loss as it will be too late for replanting.

Big Welcome Given Princess

VICTORIA, B.C. (UPI) — Britain's Princess Margaret stepped from an airliner Saturday to be welcomed by thousands of Canadians and American tourists to a month-long 4,000-mile official tour of Canada.

Margaret began her first official visit to the dominion as the representative of her sister, Queen Elizabeth II. But she received a personal tribute of her own when British Columbia offered her an entire island, to be named in her honor and developed as a park.

Margaret has visited Canada before, but not as an official representative of the Queen.

Her visit began officially with a message of welcome from Governor General Vincent Massey.

"We hope that your visit, madame, will be a very happy one," he said. "We know what pleasure it will give us."

EDITORIALS

Pulitzer Prize Colored

Pulitzer prizes ordinarily are awarded for outstanding meritorious work in some particular field but some of the awards have been odious to the south because they seemed to be based on flouting southern traditions, rather than on good work or service.

A fairly recent example is the awarding of the Pulitzer prize for editorial writing to Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock for his obnoxious expostulations on the integration situation in Little Rock Central High School. Ashmore was not awarded the prize because of any excellence in writing but because he, as an imported outsider, wrote in a vein directly contrary to the views of most of his readers and of the people of his region. In other words, anyone who will go into a region and try to upset its standards and traditions rates a Pulitzer award.

This was demonstrated when Hodding Carter of Greenville, Miss., a native southerner who obtained most of his education in the north, was given a pulitzer citation in 1946 for advocating race-mixing.

It is likely that any editor of any weekly newspaper in Louisiana could win a Pulitzer award if he would come out violently enough in favor of race-mixing and in opposition to the sentiment of his community.

This makes the awards in the newspaper lines seem a little tainted, stained or "colored."

Pulitzer prizes are divided into many different classifications. The major categories are physics, chemistry, medicine and physiology, literature, and peace. The literature field is sub-divided into such things as newspaper editing, fiction, poetry and so on. In addition, the newspaper division is further split into such groups as meritorious, public service local reporting, national reporting, international reporting, editorial writing and so on.

Prize money for each of the top winners in the five major categories in 1956 was $38,663. Ashmore's prize was down to about the $1,000 level.

Despite his violent vocalizations in favor of integration, Ashmore apparently does not employ any Negroes in the department of the paper which he heads. In a letter, he said in part:

"We do not at this time have any Negro editorial employe on the Gazette . . . There is no policy prohibition against hiring Negroes but we see no particular need for one now and recognize that any Negro staff member would work under consideration restrictions, due to the prevailing mores and customs of the community."

Commenting on Ashmore's statement, George E. Sokolsky, Monroe Morning World columnist says:

"Often what is involved is not prejudice at all but what Ashmore calls 'mores and customs of the community,' which are difficult to overcome . . .

Writers such as Ashmore and Carter, who attempt to upset the 'mores and customs of the community' may win Pulitzer prizes but changing the opposition to race-mixing is something they cannot accomplish so easily."

No Polio Cases Here

Residents of Ouachita parish have reason to rejoice and to be proud that no cases of polio have been reported in this parish this year. This has been true despite the fact that ordinarily June is the month in which the infantile paralysis scourge is worst.

It is still importance to emphasize the necessity of taking polio shots so that our freedom from this paralyzing disease may continue.

Two pictures for parents to remember appeared in recent newspapers.

One showed a mother and seven children gathered about a man in an iron lung. The caption, under a Michigan dateline, said that the whole family had been vaccinated against polio except the father. Now he is so paralyzed that he cannot breathe without mechanical aid.

The other showed an infant of five months in a respirator tank. The caption, datelined from Texas, said that the baby was a victim of polio paralysis.

What does a father think when he gazes up from an iron lung into the sorrowing, bewildered faces of his children? What goes through a mother's mind when she looks down on the polio-wasted body of her child?

One thing they must both realize, to their horror and regret, is that polio today is unnecessary. There is a safe and effective weapon against it in the Salk vaccine. When it strikes a person in 1958 somebody almost surely has been guilty of neglect.

Far too many Americans share this guilt—nearly three out of seven, in fact. And among these neglected or neglectful millions, none is safe from polio—neither the helpless infant nor the wage-earner of a family. Last year babies under two showed the highest rate of polio attack. Young adults ran them a close second.

The Salk vaccine can protect you against this dreadful and incurable disease. Don't take a chance — take your polio shots now before disaster overtakes you.

Front-Runner Democrats Apparently Face Trouble

FALTERING FRONT RUNNER Some watchers of the political skies think they detect heavy going ahead for the three most recent ve 1960 candidates for the Democratic Presidential nomination. The candidacy of Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts appears to have lost momentum. The candidacies of Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri and Governor Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey have failed to catch fire so far.

CHIANG TO RETIRE — Americans who have recently talked to him brought away the impression that Chiang Kai - Shek has now given up any hope of ever returning to the Chinese he will retire as President of Nationalist China in 1960 and be succeeded by his long time friend, Chen Chung, recently made Nationalist Premier. Chiang contemplates extensive travel, spending much of his time in the United States, England and France.

UTAH G.O.P. SPLIT — Democrats think their chances of electing a Senator from Utah have been greatly improved by the announcement of former Republican Governor J. Bracken Lee that he will run as an independent candidate for Senator. Democrats think Lee will siphon off enough Republican votes from Senator Arthur V. Watkins to give them victory.

HOFFA TO FALL — James R. Hoffa's plan to merge all transportation unions into one big unit has little chance of success most labor leaders here think. Biggest opposition will come from railroad organizations. Some union men say such an organization might become so powerful that it could paralyze the nation.

JAPANESE AND GERMAN EXPENDITURES — How great a boon our overseas operations have been to the economy of our chief enemies in World War II is shown in Defense Department figures. In Japan we spent $2,852,000,000 from 1953 to 1957, and average of $570,400,000 annually. In Germany the expenditures for the same period totaled $1,492,000,000 or $298,500,000 annually.

TEST ON PREJUDICE—Democratic party leaders who insist a man's church affiliations are voters in any State expect it to be proven in this November's election in three of the four biggest states where elections are to be held this year the candidates for Governor are Catholics. And all three—Michael DiSalle in Ohio, David Lawrence in Pennsylvania, and Pat Brown in California—are betting favorites at this stage of the race. Averell Harriman, only Protestant Gubernatorial candidate in the four big States, is also a favorite to win.

SHERM'S SUCCESSOR? — Growing ranks of those Republicans who are convinced "Adams is sure to go" speculated on a new name as his successor this week. He was Christian A. Herter, Under Secretary of State. Points in Herter's favor: Long service in Congress and the fact he is well liked there; executive experience as Governor of Massachusetts. Point against him: He is not in robust health.

DIDN'T PLAN IT THAT WAY —President Eisenhower, who in a 1952 speech asked: "Isn't it time we had in Washington and Administration which knows how to keep spending down?" has headed an Administration of unprecedented spending, with public debt soon to exceed World War peak by $4 billion, a bigger deficspending in any Roosevelt New Deal peace year, and an unbalanced budget in prospect for six of the eight years of his term.

SPUTNIK III SEEN

BOCHUM, Germany (UPI) — Russia's Sputnik III can now be seen with the naked eye in Germany during good weather, the Bochum Observatory said Thursday. The observatory, commissioned to watch for the satellite and record its movements and radio signals as part of the International Geophysical Year, said it saw the Sputnik every day from June 11 to 16.

GEORGE SOKOLSKY'S DAYS

Negro-Booster Opposes Integrated Obituaries

Some fights are private and the bystander had better stay away from them; others are public fights that anybody can get into. Harry S. Ashmore is the executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette and once upon a time was an arch-supporter of Governor Orval Faubus of that state. Then he became an opponent of Faubus and they battled over the question of integration. Ashmore got a Pulitzer Prize out of the Little Rock fracas.

William Loeb is the proprietor of a number of New England newspapers among them the Manchester Union Leader. His father was Theodore Roosevelt's famous secretary and his wife is the daughter of the founder of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain. He is a crusader like Ashmore but for different causes and it is not likely that Loeb will ever get a Pulitzer Prize for his crusades. He is a conservative in the nineteenth century meaning for the word, that is, a liberal which then was specific and meant the extension and expansion of human liberties. Bill Loeb will take on any fight for human liberty if it is not a phony.

Those are the two principals in this particular fight.

The issue is consistency.

Loeb wants to know why, if Ashmore is such a battler for integration, does he not practice this on his Arkansas Gazette. That is like asking a man who favors equality for all human beings why he is so snobbish about the membership of his country club. Consistency is a rare and logical human quality and is not often practiced. For instance, if a man contributes heavily to some pro-Negro organization, does that mean that he wants his daughter to be married to a Negro, or if he is a Catholic, to a Protestant, or a Jew or a Moslem or vice versa all around?

Loeb and Ashmore engaged in correspondence and in a recent letter, dated June 20, 1958, Ashmore replied to Loeb:

"We do not at this time have any Negro editorial employe on the Gazette, although in the past we have had such employes on a parttime basis. There is no policy prohibition against hiring Negroes, but we see no particular need for one now and recognize that any Negro staff member would operate under considerable restrictions due to the prevailing mores and customs of the community.

"Of course we segregate Negro obituary notices as we segregate advertisements in the classified section dealing with Negro real estate. It has also long been our policy and will continue to be to identify persons in all news stories by race."

The prevailing "mores and customs of the community" always cover a multitude of prejudices. It is like the fellow who contributed heavily to Israel in the hope that it would cover up his record of never employing Jews. It surely would seem that an integrationist would employ at least one Negro reporter, just to show that he means what he says.

But from a practical standpoint, it might be useful for an integrationist in Little Rock to have a Negro reporter in order to get the Negro side of the story. However, that is Ashmore's business and not mine. Modern liberals, whether Republicans or Democrats, do not have to be consistent because modern liberalism is opportunistic and avoids general principles.

Ashmore is not in favor of integrated obituaries or integrated advertising. So what kind of integration does he believe in where it affects him or the business in which he engages?

The Negro question in the United States is too serious to be treated in so offhand a manner as Harry Ashmore, Pulitzer Prize winner as a crusader, does. It is easy to be broad-minded generally but it is tough to apply it right at home. And that is what is so true about all racial and religious predispositions. Often what is involved is not a prejudice at all but what Ashmore calls "mores and customs of the community" which are difficult to overcome as the sociologists in Red China have discovered. The fear of the evil eye persists even among those who are materialists and deny all human superstitions. As a referee, I think Loeb has the better of the argument but then he does not live in Little Rock.

SYLVIA PORTER

Signals Flashing End Of Recession

The bottom of the 1957-58 recession has been hit; we probably recorded the low about 60 days ago.

The economy is now in a transition period. Even in the boomiest of boom times, there always is a lull during the summer months because of vacations, shutdowns for model changeovers, etc., and we are living and will live through the usual lull this summer.

Perceptible signs of recovery should appear this fall; the upturn should be obvious during the final months of the year.

A high, sticky level of unemployment will remain a key problem even when the revival is unmistakable, though; we won't be able to absorb all the hundreds of thousands of workers who are entering the labor force this year and the vast numbers who have been the victims of the slump in some of our major industries until once again we are back to producing at full capacity, and that will take time.

Even though it will be many months before we will or can regain the economic peaks of mid-1957, there will be a much better feeling on the way up in late 1958 and 1959 than there was on the way down in 1957 and early 1958; that's only logical.

The above summarizes the views of mounting numbers of the most informed and responsibile economists in our country — men holding key jobs in both private industry and in policy - making Washington agencies.

Sure, there always are and always will be "ifs" and "buts." The more I study economics, the more humble I become about using its tools to make predictions on business trends.

The fact that we are into the usually inconclusive months of July - August clouds the picture, for instance. The fact that stock prices have defiantly refused to crumble in the face of some dreadful corporation earnings news in past months disturbs many experts who fear a belated crackup might seriously damage confidence at a crucial time. And no one can be positive how you will react to the new cars this fall, how freely you will spend your income and borrow to buy — and you are the key to the whole economic enigma.

Having written these qualifying sentences, I return to the fact which impresses me most — the increasing volume and variety of signals flashing an approaching up-turn. More specifically:

Over decades of study, the National Bureau of Economic Research — pioneer in reasearch into the business cycle — has developed an index of eight "leading indicators." With provocative consistency, this index has turned down well before a general business drop (it began sliding months before July 1957, the official birthdate of the 1957-58 recession.) In past advances, it also has turned up well before a broad revival.

Here is the latest date on those eight vital indicators:

(1) New orders of the durable goods industries: Up substantially between April and May, probably continuing up since.

(2) New incorporations: up noticeably between April and May.

(3) Liabilities of business failures: down sharply between April and May, probably continuing down. (A drop here is the good news, of course.)

(4) Contract awards for residential construction: up sharply since early spring to an annual rate of over a million houses now.

(5) Contract awards for non-residential construction: up sharply since early spring to an annual rate of over a million houses now.

(5) Contract awards for non-residential construction: up too.

(6) Spot market price index of 22 basic commodities: up, with raw materials prices showing largest increases since late April.

(7) Average number of hours worked per week in manufacturing: up more than seasonally between April and May and up really sharply in June.

(8) Average of stock prices: up considerably this year.

Daily Devotions

And the man said unto Joab, Though I should receive a thousand shekels .... I would not put forth my hand against the king's son. — II Sam. 18:12.

The man who spoke to Joab in the verse above is unnamed — yet we can tell a great deal about his life and character from this one statement. Before battle, King David had given instructions that his son Absalom was to be protected at all costs. Joab and his associates failed to obey, but one of their common soldiers was true to his trust. We cannot always have the companionship of those who are true to God and Christ, but we ourselves can always remain constant and faithful.

O God, help us to be dependable in all things concerning Thy Kingdon. In Christ's name we ask Thy aid. Amen.

WANTS POST OFFICE

West Monroe, La.

Hon. Allen J. Ellender
United States Senator
Washington, D. C.
Dear Senator:

Replying to your letter of July 1, responding to mine of June 15 in which you say you have requested the postmaster general to provide you with an evaluation of the existing postal facilities of the rented West Monroe post office building, you may be assured you will be regaled by that officer of contemplated improvements.

Anything this officer may say is beside the objective of the West Monroe people to secure adequate space and facilities becoming a city of its size. I dare say that it is the only city in the nation with twenty thousand people adjoining that does not have a building. I am sure you will evaluate this situation on its merits and not on what this officer has to say.

More than ten years ago, when a free post office was established here, we had to go to the governor of the state to secure aid that brought us the freedom we have and we hope such a situation will not arise again—not a thing could our representatives at Washington do about it.

Awaiting your reply with much interest,

Sincerely,
J. H. WATKINS

SOME INDIANS VOTE

West Monroe, La.

Editor, Morning World,

In "Views of Our Readers" Sunday July 6, Mr. C. C. Hopkins, in a long letter, makes the following statement, among many others:

"If this be not so, why, in the name of justice and right do not these same heart - bleeders go to bleeding for the Indians who have been segregated up yonder on a reservation by our own government that says segregation is wrong in the south but right on the Indian reservation."

That is not correct so I would like to set the record straight. While I can not speak from first hand knowledge of all the tribes in the southwest I do know that there is no segregation of the Navajos. Their children are picked up by busses and brought to school just as the children in Ouachita parish are. Mexicans Indians and Americans mingle on an equal basis. The teachers like the Indians, who are eager to learn, well disciplined and courteous. I am sure if Mr. Hopkins wishes detailed information he can write to Mr. John Young, Cuba, New Mexico, who is a member of the Sandoval county school board. The Indians do have the franchise and take it very seriously. Several years ago one of the Jemez Pueblo Indians wrote my husband asking among other things for advice on how to vote for the best good of the country. He also consulted the missionaries and priest.

Mr. Hopkins is correct in the fact that we have treated the Indians disgracefully in the past even to bringing them the white man's disease, tuberculosis.

I am a native daughter of "The Land of Enchantment," New Mexico.

WANT LUNCH INQUIRY

We are a group of bridge players who, in between our games, get in some serious conversation. I never saw so many mothers so much in favor of a wholesale investigation of the school lunch program in the Twin Cities.

One mother who is a member of the P.-T. A. of her school here in Monroe had this to say about the lunch program: "I have four children going to grammar school and every day it is the same thing. They come home starved and looking for a full meal."

Another mother of two, one in grammar, one in high school of a local private school had this to say of the program: "My children, though they go to the same school and pay the same 17 cents, yet the grammar child gets very inferior meals and lacking many vitamins, while his big brother gets the better food and plenty of it."

In one school, said a third, "the school lunch program has been used to do everything but what it was originally intended to do, namely, to feed the student."

On this point there was much discussion and we came up with these points:

(a) Some of the principals were doing a good job as far as the program was concerned but there was not enough of inspection and correction of cafeterias, kitchens, utensils, help, etc.

(b) Some principals were making a money - making business out of the program. Money was saved on meals and used to remodel, equip and hire help at the expense of the children's health. Some places this money was used to help pay a coach who walked around the cafeteria during meals and drew a salary from the school lunch program for this arduous occupation. White elephants have been bought on the school lunch program money in order to show that the money is being turned back into the program. Some principals can be so liberal with the state money as to pay salaries away above the standard salary, hoping to have a check made back for the extra and thus covering up on the books.

(c) In some places they sell other things on the side in the cafeteria — cookies, ice-cream, candy. Children then fill themselves with these "extras" and the result is no lunch is eaten. The cook naturally saves until the next day and what have you? Children who are not receiving properly prepared, necessary proteins, and caloies, meals.

(d) Children rushed through their meals and how often we see children leaving the cafeteria with their mouths full of food.

Here are some of our recommendations for the bettering of the lunch program.

1. Planned menus — make the cooks and principals comply. Otherwise let them be dropped from the program.

2. Give same food to both grammar and high school children.

3. Eliminate all sale of candy, cookies, etc. till after lunch.

4. Give sufficient time to eat lunch.

5. Frequent inspection of the cafeteria, menus, and everyting relating to the lunch-program.

6. Encourage the mothers to inquire from their children concerning lunch, what was given, did they like it, was it cooked well, enough to eat, etc.

7. Mothers clubs would do well to spend more time on building health of your students, by talking these points at their meetings rather than spend months preparing the next junior-senior prom. Let us talk about the education and health of the student and the rest will take care of itself. Why is Russia so far ahead of us in the field of science, etc. . . . We waste time on the incidentals and neglect the essentials in education. "Too little WORK and too much PLAY."

8. Let your column be open to letters to the editor and we will see what the other person has to say about an issue that is so important.

9. A question was asked . . . If a child has not the money, it is embarrassing to have that child pass along the line and see the next child pay while he does not. Could this situation be remedied so as to save any embarrassment to the less fortunate. Could tickets be given out at the beginning of each month and then all would be happy.

Editor, we ask you to give us some space in your paper and I can assure you of many eye-openers and enlightening letters.

Thanking you for your consideration in this important issue.

Boyle Gives Sage Advice

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—It has come to my attention lately that some men are having trouble with women—and don't know why.

In my lifetime, taking it as it goes, it has appeared to me that there are only two ways to deal with women, girls and widows:

1. Go outdoors and point out the stars to them.

2. Stay indoors and tell them about the stars.

Women have a strange sense of truth.

They can be sharp as a tack in a business operation, but they are eternally vulnerable to flattery. They will even consciously pay for it to bolster their ego.

An honest man can look at himself in the mirror and know that he isn't desirable. It is the rare, rare woman who can do this. No woman though her face could startle a nervous rooster into laying an egg, is without a conviction of personal beauty.

A man hesitates to be handsome. A woman demands to be pretty. And in a way she can. By being desirable and thinking of herself as desirable, she can enforce this concept of at least partial loveliness.

The ugliest woman has a passion to be admired and desired, not for her character but for her physical charm.

The whole art of dealing with women is one of perpetual adoration, emphasized by departure.

Ex-Miner Shoots Up Idaho Tavern

His first shot killed Mrs. Tanner. Hunter, standing scarcely five feet away, shouted "Get out." Olkonen fired point blank and missed, then fired again and Hunter went down with a bullet wound in the neck.

Bud McMurtrey, a customer at the end of the bar, raced for an exit and was winged in the back. Olkonen's wife, with whom he had been quarreling, was the next target. Two bullets whizzed by her head but missed. The siege at the house followed.

Hunter and his wife were celebrating their 20th wedding anniversary and Mrs. Tanner had just finished party cake and ice cream. At first, some customers thought the shots were blanks, part of the celebration.

None of the wounded was believed seriously hurt. Coroner L. G. Moon called a coroner's inquest for Monday night.

Youth Injured In Accident At Mangham

MANGHAM (Special) — Tommy Box, 20-year-old Archibald youth, was rushed to the Ball-Ellington Clinic in Rayville at 11 last night after his car was demolished after going out of control at the Mangham city limits.

Mangham Night Marshal Arlon Hutson, who investigated the wreck along with State Police from Troop F., said that Box apparently was travelling east on the Mangham-Columbia road, when his car went out of control.

The vehicle went into a ditch, continued on for 100 yards, hit a culvert and turned upside-down. It then hit a tree, tore the bark off the tree and smashed in the front of the car, turned right-side up again and bounced off the tree into nearby shrubbery, officials stated.

Pinned Under

"Box was pinned between the door and frame of his car and pieces of the car were scattered over an area 100 feet square," Hutson revealed.

"He was unconscious and bleeding from the mouth when we got there — it's possible he suffered a broken leg because his leg was caught in the door" the Marshall added.

Rescuers had to pry off what was left of the top of the vehicle to get the youth out.

The mishap occurred on the road which leads to the Mangham school. "He went off the road outside the town limits, but finally stopped in the town, with the car facing west—the direction he had come from. It was torn up so bad, we couldn't tell what year car it was," Hutson pointed out.

The youth was rushed to the clinic by Mulhearn ambulance. He regained consciousness and was being treated late last night.

No charges were filed, pending outcome of his condition.

Youth Charged With Battery Against Officer

A 19 - year - old Monroe youth landed in the Monroe jail last night, charged with committing a battery on a police officer.

Police were summoned to the corner of N. Fourth and DeSiard Streets, and Officer David Antley attempted to arrest Harold Stanley Roberts, 4503 S. Grand St., on charges of disturbing the peace and public intoxication.

Roberts punched at Antley but was taken into custody, the officer said.

He was charged with committing battery, disturbing the peace, public intoxication, resisting arrest and vagrancy, at 8:35 p.m.

Earlier, Randolf Ainsworth, 20 of Route 3, Box 262C, West Monroe was arrested by Monroe police and charged with two counts of vagrancy.

Bond was set at $350 on each count, and he was later released.

3 Men Killed As Slate In Mine Tumbles

BRICEVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) —Three men were killed today when they were trapped by falling slate in the Hershel-Braden mine near here.

Anderson County sheriff's officials said at least seven men were trapped in the mine.

The body of one of the dead miners was removed and workmen continued to dig for the other two victims.

One of the miners who escaped, Luke Wright of Lake City, Tenn., was treated at Community Hospital in La-Follette for foot and arm injuries.

Name Of School Changed

The Ouachita Valley Vocational Technical School in West Monroe is, by orders from Director S. W. Jackson, to be known by this name hereafter. The only change is the addition to its present name of the word "technical" as more expressive of its future instruction of students.

The supervisory training department of the school is to conduct at this time a series of conferences with the supervisory personnel of the automotive dealers of the Monroe area. This series will be held one night each week for a period of six weeks, it is announced by Edward J. Daigle, supervisory trainer.

The purpose is to improve supervision in all phases of industries of the Monroe area interested in improving the supervisory abilities of its personnel.

Topics will include: Leadership training, supervision for safety, working with people, public relations and human factors in safety supervision, as well as other vital topics.

This service is gladly made available in this area to industries by the Ouachita Valley Vocational Technical School.

2 Men Escape Drowning Here As Boat Sinks

Two men narrowly escaped drowning at 9 last night when their boat capsized and sunk in the Ouachita River, near the new traffic bridge.

The American Legion rescue truck was summoned to the scene, manned by firemen John D. Meeks and M. L. Broadway. Fire Chief A. R. Brown and Capt. M. M. Smith also responded.

When firemen arrived at a boat dock just to the north of the new bridge, on the West Monroe side of the river, the men had reached the dock after swimming from midway in the river, firemen reported.

The men were identified only as a Mr. Armstrong and a Mr. Rogers. They did not give their full names to firemen.

The boat and motor sunk.

PLANE INTERRUPTS GAME

DERBY, England (UPI)—The crowd and the cricket players paused and stood by quietly Thursday while a small, single-engine plane circled overhead, lost altitude when its engine sputtered and stopped and finally landed on the cricket field. The pilot hopped out of the cockpit, fussed with the engine, got back in and took off without saying a word. The cricket game resumed.

MRS. W. S. VINCENT

Annual P-TA Workshop To Open At NE

Parent-Teacher leaders will underscore the national organization's theme, "Circle of Responsibility," throughout the six-day P-TA workshop, which opens tomorrow at Northeast State under direction of Mrs. W. S. Vincent.

The event will be the fourth annual summer conference sponsored by the institution, which offers college credit in education for the work.

Daily sessions are scheduled in the faculty lounge of the Administration Building from 1 to 4 p.m. with the exception of Saturday when the meeting is set from 8 to 11 a.m.

Mrs. Vincent, who has moderated the workshop each year, is principal of Sherrouse School, a past president of the Louisiana P-TA, and presently is state citizenship chairman.

Specialties on tomorrow's program will include talks by the current Louisiana Parent - Teacher president, Mrs. George Walther, of Lake Charles; Mrs. Leon S. Price, of Dallas, national publicity chairman, and Mrs. Agnes Miller, of the Plum Street School faculty.

Emphasis

Mrs. Walther will emphasize implementing purposes of the PTA through program building. She also will bring from the National Congress of Parents and Teachers means of using activities in effecting the national theme. Through its program, she will show ways in which the P-TA can influence the welfare of children in the home, school, church, and community.

The state president's contribution to the workshop stems from college training, teaching, and knowledge and experience gained through several years of activity in local, regional, and state levels of the organization.

Prior to accepting her present office, Mrs. Walther held the presidency of an elementary school P-TA in Lake Charles, the program chairmanship of the Lake Charles Parent-Teacher Council, directorship of the 7th District, and later the vice presidency of the Louisiana organization.

She was chairman of the state P-TA committee which conducted a survey leading to the adoption of a substantially higher teacher salary schedule.

an passerby found Gill lying beside the road, slain with a shotgun blast in the head sixty feet away, officers found Galloway shot in the back.

Bickham said he bought a dollar's worth of gasoline at a service station, drove to New Orleans and left his shotgun with a relative.

Then, he said, he headed toward Baton Rouge, driving until he ran out of gas about one mile south of Sorrento.

Bickham abandoned the car and began walking. Sorrento Town Marshal Earl Trabeaux picked him up about 6 a.m., questioned him briefly, then gave Bickham a ride to the bus station.

Later, Trabeaux found the abandoned auto, with two shotguns belonging to Gill and Galloway in the back seat.

He said he didn't notice either the two pistols or the bullet wound in giving Bickham a ride. But, Trabeaux added, with a sigh of relief, "I was pretty lucky. I think I'll go home and rest awhile."

Bickham said he left the bus just before it got to the traffic circle on the Airline Highway east of Baton Rouge.

Patrolman D. J. Lemoine spotted him walking beside the highway about 8:45 a.m. Calling for another patrol car, he arrested Bickham.

Searching the Negro, the officers found the two guns and the bullet wound.

Audit Reported 2 Years Behind

tion from Jackson's department.

He said all other state department audits, including the big audits of the Department of Highways and LSU, have been completed.

Normally Behind

According to Lancaster, state audits normally run a year behind, but he said he doubts whether the Education Department has all the information available for the audit being prepared.

Jackson was unavailable for comment. His office reported he was out of town.

Lancaster said he assumed the information necessary for the audit wasn't available to the Education Department "because it hasn't come in yet."

School boards submit financial and statistical reports to the department. Lancaster confirmed reports that separate audits on four specific phases of education operation have not been completed:

1. Lunch program. 2. Surplus property division. 3. Transportation costs. 4. Expense accounts.

He said, "We're in the process of making a two year audit of the Education Department, but I couldn't say when it will be completed. All I can say is that we will get rid of it as quickly as possible."

Lancaster said individual audits of school boards have been completed and that his department finished a surplus property audit two years ago.

But he said the delays were not caused by a lack of cooperation from Jackson or personnel in his office. Jackson on several occasions has stalled reporters when asked for public information.

Among Factors

Audits are one of several factors considered when budgets for the various departments are drawn up by the budget committee, which in turn recommends the budgets to the House Appropriations Committee.

The budgets too are recommended from estimates of the coming year made by department heads. The estimates are taken from figures based on the last audit.

Thus, audits play an important part in determining the various budgets.

The following facts were brought out by the current budget report: 1. For fiscal year 1956-57, Jackson produced an "actual" figure of $563,671 97 for operating his office. (The last complete audit of his department was made for fiscal year 1954-55).

2. For fiscal year 1957-58, he estimated $630,278 would be necessary to run his office, an increase of about $67,000. (The last complete audit of his department was made for fiscal year 1954-55).

3. For fiscal year 1958-59, he estimated $706,690 for his office, an increase of approximately $76,000.

4. The 1958-59 estimate was $133,000 more than the unaudited "actual" figure for fiscal year 1956-57.

Lancaster said his department, in making the audit, will deal only in finances. No statistical reports, such as the number of students served daily by the individual parish programs, will be made by his office, he said.

Reporters began an investigation into the school lunch program, investigation into the Education Department audits following reports that a $5-million surplus in the school lunch program existed after fiscal year 1956-57.

A 10 man legislative committee was appointed and Long ordered an "extensive investigation" into the lunch program. Hearings in all 64 parishes are anticipated.

Lancaster and Commissioner of Administration James S. Reily said earlier in the week they had opened their own parish by parish survey of the lunch fund surpluses.

The probe was called as the Legislature planned to adjourn and reports that a special session will be held this fall for the purpose of raising funds for state operation.

Soviet Army Paper Says Airmen Lied

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet army publication Red Star charged today that nine U.S. airmen lied in their account of being forced down in Soviet Armenia last month.

Red Star did not give a detailed account of its own but it denied the C-118 in which the airmen wandered over the Soviet border was shot down by two Soviet Migs.

It said the claim of the airmen that they were shot down merely showed "the American provocateurs (would) like to cover up their own crimes against the Soviet Union by making noises."

The Pentagon in Washington failed to inform the American public that the Americans refused to obey a Soviet command to follow the intercepting fighters to a landing field, Red Star said.

"Finally the Soviet fliers forced the interloping aircraft to land on Soviet territory," it said.

Red Star did not specify how this was accomplished.

REPORT FROM N.M.

Reporter Along On Killer Hunt

By BILL RICHARDSON

CUBA, N.M. (AP)—It gives you a darn funny feeling to know you may be in the sights of a killer's gun.

We arrived at the road adjoining the slayer's mountain camp just as night was falling. The search was for a prospector who had killed two children and wounded the mother of one.

"I heard a shot," said State Police Sgt. I. E. Salazar to the tense knot of armed men.

Then a shout came from 200 yards back in the brush. Salazar bucked his car over the sagebrush.

We followed in a Game Department patrol car driven by Warden Nando Mauldin.

Sitting in the front seat of a white sedan was a posseman, Sam Hill, a ranch foreman from the Valle Grande. His white shirt was soaked with blood. His face was twisted with pain.

"The s.o.b. got Sam," Apernicio Duran, holding the wounded man, said.

Another car drove up.

"Douse those lights!" an officer shouted.

The killer was still back on the wooded mountain slope from where he had ambushed Hill and two other posse members.

"He's got a telescopic sight. He can pick us out even in this light," said a voice from the gathering dark.

Cigarettes went out as if they had all been stepped on by a giant heel.

"We'd better get out of here and watch the road until morning," came another voice. "He's shot four people with three bullets and there's no use walking back there in this light. He can see us a lot better than we can see him."

A car raced back for the road, carrying the wounded man. The other cars, their drivers ducking low, followed.

"We'd better fan out in case he tries to walk out," Mauldin said. The others agreed.

About half a mile up the road, at the head of the mountain valley, Mauldin stopped.

"We can wait here," he said. Carbines were unlimbered and officers and volunteers crouched behind the car watching the dark face of the mountain where every shadow became a bearded, armed figure.

"You'd better take off that shirt," said a voice. I took off the light colored shirt I wore and started shivering in the mountain cold. It was better than getting shot.

The men talked in whispers, listening for a sound from the brush. We crouched behind the cars.

"Have you ever seen what a 30-36 slug can do going through one of these cars?" Mauldin asked. "We're sitting ducks."

Mauldin and a state policeman, Fred Garcia, climbed above the road and hunched behind the brush.

A sharp sound of a cartridge being placed in a rifle chamber broke the stillness.

'FAIRLY OPTIMISTIC'

Official Sees Farm Bill Okay

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A high-ranking administration farm official said Saturday he was "fairly optimistic" about chances for Senate passage next week of the administration - backed omnibus farm bill.

If the legislation becomes law, it could produce lower cotton prices and ward off a potential increase in the price of rice next year. It also could result in reducing corn price supports and dropping federal attempts to control production of corn.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Marvin L. McLain said the "big problem" is to head off efforts of antiadministration senators to "load" the measure with price-raising amendments aimed at reversing administration farm plans. The administration hopes to increase crop sales and farm income by fixing price supports closer to market leveals.

McLain added, in an interview, that he believes most farm belt senators now are "interested in getting an acceptable bill through." He said that if Congress approves the bill, administration officials will turn their attention next to two major commodities left untouched by the measure—wheat and tobacco.

Changes A Must

The administration will make sure that lawmakers from wheat and tobacco areas "know exactly what's facing them next year," McLain added. "Changes will have to be made in those programs or we'll be in serious trouble."

He gave no indication what changes would be proposed in the price support-production control programs for wheat and tobacco. He pointed out, however, that last January the President asked for authority to reduce price support floors and eventually ease acreage controls on these and other major crops.

Wheat supports under present law range between 75 and 90 per cent of parity. Tobacco is pegged at 90 per cent as long as marketing quotas remain in effect. For both crops, the administration had asked authority to fix supports between 60 and 90 per cent of parity.

McLain said prospects for passage of the Senate cotton-rice-feed grain bill were brightened by a "changed attitude" among many farm lawmakers. He said it's "entirely different than anything I've seen in my five years here—they finally realize that something must be done."

Repeal Acreage Controls

The legislation would repeal all federal acreage controls on corn beginning in 1959 and drop the farm parity price formula—dating back to New Deal days—as the basis of price support. In place of parity, supports would be based on 90 per cent of the average open-market price for the past three years.

Cotton and rice would move to the open market support plan after a two-year transition period. During the two years cotton growers would be allowed to choose individually between relative big planting allotments with low price supports or smaller allotments with higher supports. Rice growers would maintain their present acreage allotments with supports for the two years ranging between 75 and 90 per cent of parity, at Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson's discretion.

Without this or other acreage legislation, allotments for all cotton and rice growers would be cut sharply in 1959. This threat has brought many southern lawmakers to reluctant support of the Benson-backed package bill.

Many of the southerners ordinarily would back Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) and others in scheduled efforts to write in higher supports for feed grains and dairy products. But the threat of a presidential veto, killing the cotton and rice acreage features, was expected to weigh heavily against anti - administration amendments.

Fear Hardest Economy Tilt Still Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a small but influential group in Washington, known simply as "The Four," which suspects that the hardest economic battle remains to be fought — and is girding for it.

The enemy won't be recession but inflation. The signs of business upturn have been noted hopefully; it appears that a modest recovery may be under way this fall.

If so, the recovery will coincide with the start of a new era of federal deficit financing on a vast scale, and the combined pressures of rising private and government demand could generate another serious surge of inflation.

That's what "The Four" have been worrying about for some time now.

It was concern over inflation which brought the group into existence last September as an unofficial body lacking formal name or legal status.

Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson watched the value of the dollar sink to new lows month by month, and broached his idea to President Eisenhower.

The idea was simply that the officials directly concerned with money, credit and federal finance — himself and Chairman William McC. Martin Jr. of the Federal Reserve Board — should consult jointly and quite frequently with the President and his top economic advisers. The latter are Raymond J. Saulnier, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, and Gabriel Hauge, presidential assistant for economic affairs.

Eisenhower concurred. Since then he has averaged a meeting a month with the four officials.

The meetings had hardly begun when the problems of recession took priority over the problems of inflation. Spending speedups, easier money and lower interest rates were the obvious answers.

To put the brake back on—ever so gently at first to prevent a relapse — will be a more delicate job. But all of "The Four" are determined that there will be no repetition of the events that followed the 1953-54 recession. Before people realized the recession was over, the recovery blossomed into a buying binge, and an inflation that hasn't been stopped yet.

Already "The Four" are weighing the variety of ideas — just about everything short of direct wage and price controls — to keep prices from shooting the moon.

SENATE PROBERS

May Link Chicago Fire To Gangsters

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Rackets Committee will try to find out next week whether its investigation of the underworld touched off a "Chicago fire."

The blaze under inspection occurred May 13 at Allgauer's Restaurant and caused about a million dollars in damage. Two gunmen entered the place, sprinkled it with gasoline, and set fire to the interior furnishings.

It was speculated at the time that the arsonists might have been trying to frighten into silence some of the restaurant operators who were being interviewed by the committee in connection with its current investigation of mobster domination of some labor unions.

If so, they wasted their matches. A number of Chicago restaurant men testified before the committee this week and several more are scheduled as witnesses next week. One of them is Gus Allgauer, owner of the burned cafe.

Committee counsel Robert F. Kennedy declined to say what information he expected to develop. The fire figured only briefly during last week's hearing.

Kennedy said the committee also would question next week an unidentified witness who had been intimidated by unidentified persons in Chicago.

Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark) revealed Friday that the FBI investigating attempts to intimidate some of the committee's witnesses. Kennedy said the case involved one witness in Chicago and two in Detroit who will testify at a later hearing.

The Chicago hearing, which began Tuesday, will resume next Tuesday and run the rest of the week.

The concession stand operated by a blind man in the Monroe Police Station is the latest target in the wave of juvenile criminal activity.

A 13-year-old boy who assisted the blind operator by selling candy admitted to Monroe police yesterday that he took $16 from the stand.

He also admitted the attempted burglary of St. Joseph's church, 506 Benton St., on Friday night. Entry was not gained in the attempt.

Two Negro youths, age 12 and 14, admitted burglarizing the soft drink machine in the Supreme Bedding Co. on July 10. They obtained $2.50 which was recovered.

All juveniles have been placed in the detention home.

WHITE RAT DISAPPEARS

LONDON (UPI) — Merlin, the magician's little white rat, pulled a neat vanishing act from its cage at the Revenue Theater Thursday and even cleared the street outside. The rat ran out of the theater, threw pedestrisns into an uproar and halted traffic before it perched on a window ledge. The act ended when the little beast succumbed to the London heat and expired on the spot.

Johnson To Support Ike Trade Move

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson has decided to throw his full weight behind the administration's push to save President Eisenhower's foreign trade tariff-making authority.

Associates of the Texan said Saturday he is going "all out" to line up votes to restore a House provision in the reciprocal trade extension bill sought by the President. It stipulates that presidential rejection of a Tariff Commission ruling could be overturned only by a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress.

Johnson's activity in behalf of the measure sharply increased the administration's chances of knocking out Senate Finance Committee language which reverses the House escape clause procedure. The committee, by an 8-7 vote, held that the Tariff Commission's findings should stand unless a presidential rejection could be sustained by a majority vote of both houses.

The administratipn, with the cooperation of Senate GOP leader William F. Knowland, sent its top trade experts to the Capitol to help swing the Senate against the Finance Committee version.

Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks and Asst. Secretary of State for Economic Affairs C. Douglas Dillon huddled with GOP leaders. Dillon, Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson and Asst. Secretary of State William Macomber conferred with Johnson.

Present strategy, it was stated, is to restore the House language preserving the president's veto authority, rather than to work for a compromise in the Senate.

Royal Romance Said Finished For Princess

BORGHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — A spokesman of the Swedish royal household said Saturday Princess Margaretha's romance with British jazz pianist Robin Douglas-Home is "finished." He indicated it was Robin who called it off.

Robin, 26-year-old scion of a noble but not-so-rich British family, was to have come here from London Saturday to write a happy ending to his year - long courtship of the pretty 23-year-old Princess.

He cancelled the trip suddenly late Friday night.

A spokesman at the Swedish royal summer villa on the Island of Oeland off the Swedish east coast said Margaretha spoke to Doublas - Home by telephone for 10 minutes Friday night and the engagement was broken off then.

Soviet Mission Sent To Alaska

By TOM HENSHAW
Associated Press Religion Writer

"I present you," wrote Grigor Shelikov to his lieutenant, Alexander Barnov, "with some guests who have been selected by order of the Empress to spread the word of God in America."

The guests were eight Russian Orthodox clergymen and 10 lay servants selected by the Empress Catherine II at Shelikov's request to bring the Christian Gospel to the heathen—and apostate traders —in Alaska.

Few missionaries have been subjected to the physical and mental anguish that was the lot of those who first brought the Christian word to the territory that is to become the 49th state.

The Russians who had preceded them viewed the newcomers with suspicion and outright hatred. The natives accepted Christianity eagerly and, just as eagerly, fell away when the nearest clerical back was turned.

The missionary party arrived in Alaska in August 1794 aboard two ships crowded with supplies and prospective colonists. The supplies and colonists were welcomed. The missionaries were not.

Baranov, a lusty frontiersman who ran Alaska as his private preserve, looked upon them as meddlers to be thwarted by any method, fair or foul. Baranov knew most of the foul.

It wasn't long before the Archimandrite (Abbot) Joseph, leader of the mission party, was complaining to Shelikov that Baranov "continually sat in his house hatching mischief."

The archimandrite records that the first winter the missionaries were housed in leaky huts and forced to forage for food on the beaches, while Baranov and his men caroused in luxury.

Another member of the missionary party, one Father Juvenal, draws a chilly picture of the arch enemy Baranov at the priest's last service before transferring to his last post on the wild mainland.

"I could not help," he wrote, "but marvel at Alexander Alexandreievitch (Baranov) who stood there and listened and crossed himself . . . and joined in the singing with the same hoarse voice with which he was shouting obscene songs the night before when I saw him in the midst of a drunken carousal with a woman seated in his lap."

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: You say that Christ is the Saviour of men. But I should like to ask, what does He save men from? Does He simply save them from hell hereafter? Or has His salvation any meaning for this life? J. L.

ANSWER: The salvation of Christ has meaning for every phase of life, both here and hereafter. The Bible says that the gospel has promise of the life which now is, as well as of that which is to come. (I Timothy 4: 8).

Of course, it is true that Christ's salvation will have its final and complete meaning beyond this life. He has promised that those who believe in Him shall not come into judgment (John 5:24), and the Apostle Paul speaks of Him as the One who "delivereth us from the wrath to come" (I Thessalonians 1:10). But remember that Christ not only saves us from hell; He also saves us for heaven; and we shall never know all that His salvation means until we see Him face to face.

Yet even now, in this life, we know in some measure the saving power of the Lord Jesus. I will mention three dread enemies from whose dominion the Lord Jesus rescues us if we are prepared to trust in Him as our Saviour. The first is the guilt of sin; and He saves us from that by offering us God's free gift of forgiveness. The second is the power of evil; and here His salvation consists in the gift of the Holy Spirit, who enables us to live victoriously. The third enemy is the fear of death. The Christian can look this grim foe full in the face and cry, "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." (I Corinthians 15:57)

Churches See Grave Issues In Recession

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Rumblings of the recession are heard today among the churches.

They're wrestling with the effects—both on their pocketbooks and on their consciences.

"Grave moral and spiritual issues are involved," says the Board of Social and Economic Relations of the Methodist Church.

As for the collection plate, it has fared variously. Receipts of some congregations have skidded. Others, with extra effort, are doing better than ever.

"It's often a matter of what countermeasures have been taken," says the Rev. Arthur Rinden, a church budget-raising expert.

In any case, U.S. religious institutions, with assets of 131½ billion dollars and programs totaling 3½ billion a year, are sensitive to business trends.

One dark note is a slight sag in church spending for new buildings.

Breaking a steady, 10-year climb in building outlays, the total dropped 1 per cent in the first quarter of 1958, despite prior predictions of a continued rise.

David M. Church, director of the American Assn. of Fund-raising Counsel, says time is too short and the amount of the drop too small to draw definite conclusions, but the figure is the best index of church financial status.

On many fronts, however, church programs dollar-wise are still going up. Most denominational conventions this year have set increased over-all budgets.

Southern Baptists reported that central receipts for the first half of 1958 were more than 8 per cent ahead of 1957.

But what is going on in local parishes where the first signs would show?

The interdenominational fortnightly Christianity Today said a survey indicates a trend toward "caution about future spending," adding: "Individual members were not as willing to pledge amounts of money over an extended period."

Of 30 Southern Baptist pastors questioned at a Kansas City meeting, 12 thought the recession had adversely affected offerings. Of 12 Los Angeles churches polled, all said income had dropped. But many elsewhere said it was up.

The Rev. Mr. Rinden, of the Stewardship and Benevolence Department of the National Council of Churches, says the recession has "caused a number of churches to use more care in setting their budgets.

"As a result they've come off better than before."

A flood of demands has resulted this year in his department holding seven seminars at which pastors (about 40 at each seminar) are trained in budget-raising methods. Comparatively, only two such seminars were held last year.

Several church groups have urged government steps to ease recession hardships and unemployment. "Involuntary unemployment is a basic injustice . . ." said the general board of the 32-denomination National Council.

Trenton's W.M.U. Group Will Meet Next Thursday

The Trenton Women's Missionary Union quarterly meeting will be held next Wednesday in the Fairpark Baptist Church of West Monroe.

Monroe's 'Clark' Finally Revealed

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

BATON ROUGE — Dressed in a neatly trimmed light blue suit, Jimmy Davis stepped to the front of the bandstand, patted his foot, gave the beat to the band and filled the hall with "You Are My Sunshine."

The many legislators and guests present for the annual legislative dance responded with an ovation suitable for someone announcing his candidacy for governor.

Jimmy snapped his fingers through the number, which he himself wrote and made famous, and had little difficulty in getting the dance - goers to "jine in."

In fact, he went over so big they clamored for more, and Jimmy, being an obliging man, returned for an encore.

Looking awfully fit for a man of about 50, the ex-governor captured the audience with his easy, personable air. When he stepped down from the bandstand, there were still cries of "More, more."

It left the impression that bait had been dangled and perhaps there will be "more, more" of Jimmy Davis, a man scanning the field as a possible candidate for governor.

Back in Shadows

While Jimmy was spreading sunshine through the dance hall, sitting back in the shadows was Mayor Chep Morrison of New Orleans. Chep came down, was introduced and grinned at the house.

Chep is interested, too, in taking a second "forward step."

A few hours later Jimmy said he was going to head up to his farm at Newellton and do a little fishing on Yuckatan.

"Mr. Clark"

With firecrackers bursting beneath the feet of the legislators, the House closed out in rip roaring fashion in the wee hours of the morning Thursday.

But before they headed home for the long hot summer, Ben Holt, the Rapides parish lawmaker, twiddled his mustache and had this to whisper: "Just between you and me, I just remembered that fellow Clark's first name."

"Yea," perked up the listener.

"Yea," whispered Holt." It was Kilroy. Kilroy Clark."

So with that came the last to do with "that fellow Clark," Monroe's mystery man, who for some odd reason has been in and out of more legislative developments.

"But," said Holt, "that fellow Kilroy Clark is finished. He'll be back for the special session. But after that, he's through."

Field's Field Day

T. T. Fields closed out the session true to form. He was in the middle of everything.

He and E. J. Grizzaffi spent a large part of the day buying gifts, paid for by the House members themselves, for legislative employees and Speaker Robert Angelle, who received silver cuff links shaped in the form of Louisiana with a diamond at Baton Rouge.

Before T. T. could get through making the presentations, the New Orleans delegation dropped in a last minute resolution to legalize bingo.

With the House in a "Bingo" mood and the Farmerville lawmaker voicing opposition, they appointed T. T. to a committee of four, delegated to tell the Senate the lower chamber was ready to go home.

The strategy was to get Fields out of the House so that the Bingo resolution would stand a better chance of passing.

But Fields sailed back in time to do battle. With Fields leading the way and Spencer Myrick of Oak Grove pointing out that somebody was voting the machines of several members who weren't present, the resolution was postponed until the first day of the next Legislature.

The Lincoln Champ

The last night's activities also featured the naming of a new champion; Buddy Napper of Lincoln parish, a former semi-pro baseball player, tennis lover and now follower of the links won the Legislatures first golf tournament.

Buddy licked Joe Bossetta of New Orleans, who spent his final day blasting "yellow journalists."

Bossetta had his nerve. He delivered a lengthy typewritten speech before the House and then turned to the Press corps and forbid any paper to carry his remarks unless printed in full.

We suppose that Bossetta forgot that any newsman can quote any public official making a public address.

Any way, Bossetta said there were only four good reporters at the session, namely two somebodys from a New Orleans TV station, Bryce Miller of UPI, and Maggie Dixon of the Morning Advocate.

All the rest, he said were "yellow journalists."

We don't know about the other three, but Bryce Miller said he was insulted.

A good newspaperman in the eyes of some public officials is merely a good publicity man.

The Lying Newspapers

So when Emilie Comar of the New Orleans States phoned in Bossetta's speech, he led off, something like this: "Rep. Joe Bossetta of New Orleans delivered an address today which he forbid the newspapers to carry unless in full detail. Here are some of the excerpts:"

Where is Sparks?

Last week we referred to Sen. James Sparks as a "down the roader." For those who misunderstood, Jim Sparks travels the "middle of the road," sometimes he's with ol' Earl, sometimes he's not.

He says it's to the best advantages of himself and his constitutients. Actually, Sparks gets along with most everybody, including a Baton Rouge reporter who writes him up big.

Who's A Rat?

Monroe's Gilbert Faulk took the mike, held a newspaper in one hand and jokingly told the House that he regretted to see Rep. Jesse McLain referred to as a "rat" in print.

Faulk was having a good time off Grizzaffi, who said he named a pesky nutria after Jesse McLain.

Grizzaffi and McLain, who spend a great deal of time kidding each other, are actually good friends. So said Grizzaffi, "I didn't call him a rat. It just said he was a big nutria."

Concordia's Pair

While Concordia's delegation is short in height, they certainly aren't short of energy. Neither Brenham Crothers nor Jack Crane hardly missed a dance at the big ball.

They were completely different too. The senator, a likable member of the old school, was a big genteel in his way. But cowboy Crane, a good natured fellow who takes a lot of kidding from his colleagues, was working his stumpy saddle legs almost as if he were on top his horse galloping from Ferriday to the capitol.

The Return

Most of the legislators said at least 50 per cent of them won't come back.

To elaborate would take up too much.....oh, well.....

U.S. Consul Goes Back To Talk To Rebs

HAVANA (UPI) — U.S. Consul Park Wollam flew back into the rebel-held hills of Oriente Province Saturday presumaby to answer insurgent demands for some sort of recognition from the United States.

The rebel demands appeared to be the only obstacle holding up the release of 29 kidnaped American sailors and marines.

Wollam, the chief American negotiator with the rebels, returned to the insurgent camp following talks at the U.S. embassy here with ambassador Earl Smith.

Officials at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay said another man, described as short, stocky and wearing a mustache, accompanied Wollam into the hills. Observers speculated he might be from the embassy, but this was not confirmed.

The rebels Friday released the last of 20 American and Canadian civilians they seized more than two weeks ago. However, only one of the 30 U.S. servicemen they kidnaped has been turned loose.

Informed sources at the U.S. naval base said the rebels "obviously are holding out again for some kind of United States recognition."

Andrew St. George, a freelance newsman from New York City, returned from the Oriente Province mountains today.

He said he had been at the hideout of Raul Castro, brother of insurgent leader Fidel Castro and mastermind behind the kidnapings for a week and had not seen any servicemen in the area.

Methodist Group Takes Strong Move

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—The official board of the Haughton Methodist Church has urged all Methodist churches in the state to use economic pressure to prevent the Louisiana Conference and individual preachers from advocating integration of the races.

The Haughton board forwarded to all other Methodist churches in Louisiana a copy of a resolution it passed. The resolution said that "should the conference ever again adopt any resolution, sanction or approve directly or indirectly any resolution relating to the integration of our schools or churches the official board of the Haughton Church will cease to participate by withholding all payments to the Louisiana Conference and benevolent program."

The resolution also said that "Should the Louisiana Conference ever send a minister to serve the Haughton Methodist Church who sanctions or approves directly or indirectly anything relating to integration of our church, we will refuse to pay his salary."

The resolution which hit at the stand taken by the Louisiana Methodist Conference in its meeting here this spring was passed unanimously, according to Harold Montgomery, chairman of the official board. The conference adopted a resolution at its annual meeting in Shreveport which opposed the closing of schools as a means of preventing integration.

The conference resolution came at a time when segregationist leaders were pushing a bill in the state Legislature which would empower the governor to close any public school ordered to integrate. Segregationist leaders interpreted the conference resolution as favoring integration over closing of the schools. The Legislature subsequently passed the proposed school closing bill.

The Haughton board delegated Montgomery to write a letter to members and boards of stewards of Methodist churches to accompany the Haughton resolution.

Paul Martin Looks 'Em Over

The West Monroe High Rebels, with their August football encampment not far away and an early season trip to Little Rock, Ark., to finance, got good news this week from Oliver O. Cloyd, owner of the Twin City Speedway, and from the association of area stock car racers who run regularly at the oval that Cloyd built.

The Quarterback Club of West Monroe has announced that Cloyd, himself a member of the Quarterbacks, and the racers have agreed to donate receipts of their July 27 program to help finance the football camp and the trip to Little Rock for the September 12 game with Central High.

Regular speedway prices will prevail, and seating accommodations are due to be about doubled by installation of bleachers in addition to the regular grandstand.

"This is a mighty fine gesture on the part of Mr. Cloyd and the stock car racers," said William Stovall, president of the Quarterbacks. "We believe we can drum up the biggest croud the speedway has experienced, and the better our fans support the 'Rebel Races' the better we will be able to do the things most necessary for our football squad and school."

But leave it to Robert Ervin, one of the aggressive of the Quarterbacks. He has forwarded an invitation to Governor Orval Faubus of Arkansas to attend the races as a Rebel recruiting day. Says Robert: "The West Monroe Rebels will retake Central High, captured by federal elite paratroopers last year." Robert was also considering inviting Jack Crane, the Ferriday legislator, to ride his horse here for the races and pick up other riding clubs on the way.

As if fearing Faubus or Crane might not be enough, Ervin comes up with W. H. King, West Monroe barber, who is challenging Albert "Frenchie" Thibeaux, Monroe restaurant veteran, into grooming candidates for a foot race.

Again says Robert: "Mr. King has never forgotten that his candidate a few years ago, in a walking race from Bastrop to Monroe, was not able to beat Mr. Thibeaux's walker. Mr. King, although at present recovering from an operation, is challenging Mr. Thibeaux to supply a candidate to meet his man in a foot race at the speedway just before the auto races."

Frenchie, aided and abetted by R.W. "Doc" Gregory, a Monroe barber, got notoriety some time back as the "manager" and "trainer" of George Copeland, a long striding young man, who set the walking record from Bastrop to Monroe that still stands. Whether or not they can drum up a runner to meet King's challenge is yet to be determined.

Anyway, a good program is assured by the auto racers even if Ervin's plans go astray. So remember the Rebels and the stock car races. Just two weeks away!

Our Jaycee Junior golfers exceeded fondest expectations in the state tournament at New Orleans, Thursday. So its congratulations to Jim Harper, Joe Thomas, Steve Henry, and Gene Adams. The quartet captured the state team title, and Harper, playing at probably his best, landed one of the four berths on the state team that will represent Louisiana in the international tournament at Tucson, Ariz.

Harper's traveling companions on the all-expenses-paid trip to Arizona will be John Barcelo and David Lawrence Jr., both of New Orleans, and Douglas Farr of Alexandria. They earned their spots by posting the lowest scores in 54 holes of medal play.

The Twin Cities have consistently had good representation at the state Jaycee tournaments, and the development of a few young players each season is a credit to the golf clubs and their pros—Winnie Cole of Bayou DeSiard Country Club, Hugh A. Britt of Municipal Golf Club, and James Aulds of Highland Park Country Club—for encouraging the area youth to take advantage of their golf facilities.

DAVIS CUP PLAY

Little Known Yanks Shell Canadian Foe

TORONTO (AP) — The United States, which gambled with an inexperienced team, Saturday clinched its Davis Cup series against Canada without the loss of a set by winning the doubles match.

Barry MacKay, the only tested player on the Yank squad, and Sammy Giammalva of Houston, Tex., conquered Bob Bedard and Don Fontana, 6-1, 13-11, 6-4 to pile up an insurmontable 3-0 lead in the best-of-five series. It was the 12th straight Davis Cup match victory for the United States over Canada.

The vicotry sent the U.S. into the final round of the North American Zone competition. The Americans most likely will meet Argentina in the finals. The Argentines Saturday clinched a 3-0 lead over the British West Indies and next will meet Israel in the zone semifinals.

Monday's final two singles matches were reduced to exhibiton status by the MacKay-Giammalva triumph before 1,200 fans at the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club.

MacKay, 6-4 stalwart of the American squad, beat Fontana in the first singles match Thursday and Whitney Reed, an untested player from Alameda, Calif., beat Bedard on Friday.

The Canadian doubles champions gave the Americans a battle only in the long second set and a few times came close to winning it.

In the fast first set, the Americans broke Bedard's service in the second game and Fontana's delivery in the fourth for an easy victory.

The Canadians finally were able to break an American player's service, something they couldn't do in either singles match. MacKay's service was broken twice, once in the first set and again in the second. The Canadians got through Giammalva's delivery in the third set. The Americans made seven service breaks.

The decisive break in the long second set came in the 23rd game of Bedard's service. With the score at deuce, MacKay's placement and Fontana's drive over the baseline gave the Yanks the game and a 12-11 lead. They then held service for the set.

In the 10th and 18th games the Canadians were two points from taking the set and they were only one point away in the 20th game on MacKay's delivery.

Round Table Is Upset By Bernburgoo

CHICAGO (AP)—Bernburgoo, a 19-1 shot, put on a blazing finish Saturday and upset mighty Round Table in the $85,000 Warren Wright Memorial Handicap at Arlington Park.

The 5-year-old bay, owned by W. H. Bishop picked up $53,900 for the victory, exceeding his previous earnings for the year.

Round Table, who appeared to be heading for another easy victory after overtaking Shoerullah at the three-eighths pole, pulled into a two-length lead going into the stretch. Shan Pac, Shoerullah's stable mate, opened up a challenge, but Round Table managed to stay in front.

Then, coming from nowhere, Bernburgoo nipped Round Table at the wire in a photo finish.

Time for the mile and a furlong was 1:48 3-5, one-fifth off the Arlington Park record.

Round Table finished second and Shan Pac third. Bernburgoo, ridden by Clarence Meaux, returned $40.80, $6.80 and $3.40. Round Table paid $2.60 and $2.20 and the entry of Shan Pac-Shoerullah returned $3.40.

Round Table, who has earned $1,090,014, picked up $15,000 for second place in his drive to catch all-time money winner Nashua, who retired with $1,288,565. Shan Pac earned $9,000 for third and Shoerullah took $6,000 for fourth.

Tall Chief II, Round Taole's running mate, and Point of Order were scratched, leaving a field of eight.

Shoerullah took the early lead, followed by J. P. Conway's Hoop Band. Shoeruah stayed in front until Round Table, who was kept in the sixth spot by jockey Johnny Longden, took the leads at the three-eights pole. Round Table stayed there until Bernburgoo broke through.

Meaux said he role Bernburgoo "the same as I always have, no different. Just let him get his stride, and then in the last part of the race he always finishes well. I sure was surprised, naturally, but he ran a great race and deserved to get it."

Longden, the only jockey who has ridden more than 5,000 winners, said "Round Table was in slight trouble going into the first turn — kinda close quarters and crowding, and he grazed the fence a little. It didn't do him any good, of course, but from there on he was all right."

KEEPING THAT EYE ON THE BALL — Dan Sikes, Jacksonville, Fla., keeps his head down and eye on the ball as he gets out of a sand trap on the 27th fairway in yesterday's finals of the Public Links golf meet at Chicago. He went on to beat Bob Ludlow, 3 and 2, for the championship. (AP Wirephoto)

BEATS LUDLOW, 3-2

Sikes New King Of Public Links

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Dan Sikes, constantly whistling and talking to himself, calmly defeated big Bob Ludlow, the Indianapolis gym teacher, 3 and 2 Saturday to win the National Public Links Golf Championship.

The hawk - faced, 27 - year - old University of Florida law student never was out of command on the long Silver Lake par 38 - 35 — 73 layout, being 5 - up — his biggest margin — after the 19th hole.

Ludlow, a 220-pounder who is also a nonchalant, deliberate player, cut Sikes edge to 2-up on the 165-yard 30th with a routine 3 when his lean Jacksonville, Fla., opponent missed the green and stubbed his chip shot.

But the big blow came to Ludlow on the 31st. He hit an eight-iron second shot three feet from the cup while Sikes was on in two, but 35 feet away. Sikes cinched a par 4 and Ludlow missed his putt which would have left him only one down.

They halved the 28th with pars and the 29th with bogey 5s, Ludlow splashing out of a water hazard with a great seven - iron shot to salvage his, and Sikes escaping from a trap for his.

Sikes slammed a No. 4 wood second shot onto the green of the 475-yard 33rd and was down in two for a birdie 4. This put him 3-up with three holes to go as Ludlow was short in two and missed a 12-footer on his birdie try.

They halved the 34th in pars.

Sportsmen's Cars Capture Feature Race

Sportsmen's models beat the modified cars in the feature race at the Monroe Speedbowl last night with the stock cars winning the top three places.

Royce Whitlock and 101 won the event with Shreveport driver Johnny Casey second in 18 and Floyd Cook third in 0. Due to the small number of modified cars on hand, both types competed against each other in one feature event instead of the usual two.

H. L. Hale's 222 won the modified trophy dash while Whitlock won the sportsmen's trophy run in 101. Whitlock also took the sportsmen's heat race in 101 with Casey second and Cook third.

Delaware Run Taken By Big Effort; $23.40

STANTON, Del. (AP) — Big Effort, a straggler in the early going, came with a tremendous rush in the stretch and won the $49,025 Delaware Oaks at Delaware Park Saturday to turn the 3-year-old filly championship picture into a jigsaw puzzle.

Jockey Pete Anderson booted the Brookmeade Stable filly to a 2½ length victory over Mrs. C. Ulrick Bay's odds - on - favorite Idun. The latter, 1957 2-year-old filly queen, was 3½ lengths in front of Mooring Stable's Tempted. Calumet Farm's A Glitter, second choice in the field of nine, wound up fourth, another half length away.

Big Effort, who returned $23.40, $6.00 and $2.60, was sixth at the start, seventh after a quarter mile, fifth coming through the back stretch and a challenging fourth at the top of the stretch.

$100,000 POT

Gold Cup Purse To Gallant Man

By BOB MYERS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Gallant Man, held off the early pace, busted loose under jockey Willie Shoemaker for a close but decisive triumph Saturday in the $162,100 Hollywood Gold Cup Handicap.

Turning on a tremendous burst of power, the little 4 - year - old champion won by a half length over Eddie Schmidt, with Seaneen third in the skimpy field of five.

Shoemaker, winning his third consecutive Gold Cup, had to give Gallant Man a bit of urging for the $100,000 first money.

The time for the mile and one-quarter was 2:01 3-5.

Waiting in the winner's circle was Gallant Man's owner, wealthy oilman Ralph Lowe of Midland, Tex., and his trainer, John Nerud.

The odds on favorite with a roaring crowd of 52,000, Gallant Man returned $2.80, $2.20 and $2.10.

Eddie Schmidt, with Alex Maese in the saddle, paid $2.60 and $2.10, and Seaneen $2.10.

This was Gallant Man's first race since he whipped Bold Ruler in the rich Metropolitan Mile at Belmont Park June 14, and was another race in his campaign for "Horse of the Year" honors which Bold Ruler won in 1957.

It was Gallant Man's first appearance in the West since he won the first race of his career at Hollywood Park as a 2-year-old June 13, 1956.

Gallant Man was flown from New York last Sunday, the 12-hour trip, and getting acclimated in the short space of time caused some concern to his admirers.

His Gold Cup Race was history of sorts. He's the first to win this race on the first try after such an air journey.

Shoemaker, who scored on the mighty Swaps in 1956 and with Round Table last year, cut it a mile closer than many expected.

Burke On Record Spree To Lead Insurance City Meet By Three Strokes

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) —A record 54-hole score gave Jack Burke Jr., a three-stroke lead Saturday at the end of the third round of the Insurance City Open Golf Tournament.

Burke, of Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., turned in a third-round 69, two under par, for a total of 199. The score was a record for the first three rounds in the seven-year history of the $25,000 tournament.

The tournament is being held on the Wethersfield Country Club's 6,551-yard, par 71 course.

Burke, who led after the second round, shot even par on the front nine. He birdied the 11th hole with a 15-foot putt, birdied the 14th, missed the green and took a bogey on the 17th, and clicked in another 15-footer for a birdie on the 18th.

Three strokes behind was Art Wall Jr., of Pocono Manor, Pa. Wall shot a six-under-par 65.

Best round of the day, however, was shot by Wesley Ellis Jr., the Texan who plays out of Ridgewood, N.J. He had an eight-under-par 63 for a 54-hole total of 203. This put him in third-place tie with Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., who had a 69.

Three other players were knotted at 204. They were Don Whitt of Alameda, Calif., with a third-round 66; George Bayer of San Gabriel, Calif., with a 70; and Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., with a 70.

John McMullin of Fair Oaks, Calif., playing in the same threesome with Ellis, provided the thriller of the day with a 164-yard hole-in-one.

McMullin scored the first ace of his career with a four iron on the 13th hole.

RACING TODAY

Changing Lineup For Stock Cars

The Twin City Speedway, with promise of more contenders, presents its usual stock car racing today with one variation from the usual. The feature race lineup will put the fastest cars in the rear and work up to the slowest machines in the front to make for a more exciting race, track officials hope.

The time trials, beginning at 1 o'clock, will go as usual as the cars shoot for the track's 28.3 seconds record for the half mile oval of the old Natchitoches and downing Pines roads. The driver posting the fastest time in the trial heat will be presented a trophy.

Racers say a new car, in a tune-up at the track during the week, made the tour in 27 seconds, and, if the same machine can do it again today, Royce Earl Whitlock, the are speedway king, may be in for trouble if he expects to follow his usual winning form today.

Track officials report the big oval in excellent condition following completion of recent work that has eliminated most of the dust that used to plague the fans and drivers. Even if a big rain should hit the track this morning, it is now in such shape that it would still be in good form for the afternoon races.

Some 25 or more cars are expected on the track today, including No. 3, Royce Whitlock, Hurl's Garage; 16, Gary Greenway, Lou Craig Auto Sales; 38, Joe Mallard, Kennedy Garage of Farmerville; 7, Red Futch, Owen's Garage; 8, Eddie Dye, Larry's Carburetor Shop; 0, Floyd Cook, Cook's Garage; 7-11, Wainwright and Dunn; 11, Williams Garage of Bastrop; 5, Parker of Shreveport; 3, Wade Bell, Newcomer's Tire; 18, Casey Jones of Shreveport; 39, H. L. Hale, Durbin Wrecking; 17, Billy Bayles, Burt Anding; 12, Red Futch, 7-Day Garage; 45, Texaco Service Center; 222, H. L. Hale, Durbin's Wrecking; 25, Williams Garage of Bastrop; 11, Sonny Brumfield; 10, Royce Whitlock; 18, 19, 20, and 9, owned by Anding brothers, drivers to be named; A-1, Smitty Garage.

Hefley Furniture Company supplies the award for today's trophy dash.

Bartzen Gains Western Final With Olmedo

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The seedings held up in the men's singles semifinals of the Western Amateur Tennis Tournament Saturday, but top - seeded Nancy O'Connell of Chicago was upset in the women's singles.

Bernard Bartzen of Dallas, No.1 in men's singles, had too much experience and endurance and breezed past third - seeded Mike Green of Miami Beach 6-0, 6-1.

Alex Olmedo of Los Angeles and Lima, Peru, had a hard fight to oust Donald Dell of Bethesda, Md., 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. A double fault by Dell in the eighth game of the third set gave Olmedo the service break he needed.

Susan Hodgman, 17, from Kalamazoo, Mich., upset Miss O'Connell in their semifinal match 3-6, 6-1, 8-6. She played a steady long game and Miss O'Connell said, "She just hit too many of them back."

Second - seeded Marilyn Montgomery of San Antonio overpowered Judy Hagen of Middletown, Ohio, 6-4, 9-7.

Miss Montgomery and Marta Hernandez of Mexico City won the women's doubles by defeating Leslie Ann Sparling of Toronto and Baby Vivanco of Mexico City 6-0, 6-2.

Patty Berg's 73 Keeps Her Leading Field

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Patty Berg shot a 73 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 216 and a three-shot lead in the American Championship Women's Open Golf Tournament at the Brookview Country Club.

Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay, moved into second place with a 72 and 219, and Beverly Hanson of Fargo, N.D., who had nothing but misfortune on her round, took over third with a 220.

Deadlocked at 222 were Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga., and Joyce Ziske of Milwaukee. Tied at 223 were Kathy Cornelius of Lake Worth, Fla., Betsy Rawls, of Spartanburg, N.C., and Bonnie Randolph of Naples, Fla.

Miss Berg, whose only major tournament victory this year has been the Western Open, was four under women's par for the last 11 holes after an average start. Fine iron play on the second nine helped her to a two under par 35 which protected her lead in the 72-hole, $7,500 tournament.

Miss Hanson missed a golden opportunity to share or take the lead. On the 510-yard seventh hole her second shot plunked into the creek which crossed the fairway, the next was short of the green and into a patch of rough. She failed to get on from there and wound up with a double bogey seven. On the 18th, her putt for a birdie hit the back of the cup and rolled four feet past. Her next putt rimmed the cup and rolled two feet away and she was down for a bogey five.

Miss Crocker birdied the last two holes for the runner-up spot.

Louise Suggs of Atlanta, Ga., who started the round two shots back of Miss Berg, dropped to an 80 and 225 as her short game collapsed.

TWO PRELIMS

6-Man Tag Bout On Kallio Card

A six-man relay bout is on tap at Kallio's Arena Monday night with Jack Curtis and a couple of Bills, Barney and Strong, to take on a familiar cast of characters, Charley Laye, Phil Brummett and Al Massey.

Two ten - minute preliminaries, the first to get under way around 8:15, will open the program. Both will be one-fall affairs while the main event will be two falls to win and will be over the 90-minute or less route.

Curtis and Strong are the Southeastern tag team champions, having defended their honors successfully last week by beating Laye and Brummett here. Jack and Bill were held to a draw by Laye and King Albert two weeks ago at Kallio's in a title match.

Since tomorrow's scrap will be a six-man fray, the tag team trophy won't be at stake but Laye, Brummett and Massey, especially the former two, will be working hard for a win in order to get another chance at Curtis and Strong in a title go.

Barney and Massey return after a layoff of a week or so. Al lost to George Curtis two weeks ago after being disqualified in a state title match with champion Jerry Christy the week before.

Barney, who has paired with Curtis many times in tag bouts, last performed here on June 16 when he and Curtis beat Brummett and Massey.

SIX HOMERS HELP

Pale Hose Take 2 From Red Sox

BOSTON (AP)—Sherm Lollar, Jim Landis and Earl Batty each walloped a pair of homers for a total of 15 Chicago runs Saturday as the White Sox, winless in their first seven games at Fenway Park this season, swept a double-header from the Boston Red Sox 7-4 and 13-5.

Both of Lollar's shots, the first a first-inning grand-slam, and Landis' first of the day came in the opener. Then Battey joined Landis in the long-ball show in the nightcap as the White Sox skipped from seventh place into a tie for fifth in the American League standings. The Red Sox retained, second place, but stumbled 12½ games behind New York.

It was Landis who tagged the tie-breaking blows in both games. The fleet center fielder, who has hit safely in 14 of his last 15 games, hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning of the opener behind a Nellie Fox single to break a 4-4 deadlock. In the nightcap he cracked a 5-5 tie, also in the fourth, with a three-run drive.

Jackie Jensen, who entered the twin bill riding a 17-game hitting streak for the Red Sox, was blanked in six at-bats.

Boston slugger Ted Williams, who received a silver bat for his 1957 batting championship prior to the opener, hiked his current mark nine points to .319. Ted doubled and singled twice in the opener and singled as a pinch hitter in the nightcap.

Dick Donovan went the distance in the first game, allowing nine hits, his fourth triumph of the season against 10 setbacks. Gerry Staley won the second game with six innings of six-hit, shutout relief after Frank Malzone and Jim Piersall had bopped starter Bob Shaw for homers.

Homer's pitching sensation, Allen Koch, has 12 hits for 23 times at bat and a gaudy .521 record, besides having a perfect pitching record of five victories.

Ben Carroll. Bernice catcher, is still the pacemaker in the home run department. He has swatted six for the circuit. "Red" Parker, also of Bernice, and Bob Weaver, Minden, have each clobbered five.

Larry Williams, Ole Miss star with Bernice, tops the pitchers with a 6-0 record. Koch, the Auburn product, is 5-0.

WHIP SENATORS

Virgil's Homer Ignites Tigers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ossie Virgil slammed a homer Saturday to touch off a three-run Detroit fifth inning which held up for a 3-1 victory over the Washington Senators.

The Senators were at bat in the ninth when the game was shortened by a rainstorm. The official result reverted to eight innings.

Tom Morgan, pitching brilliantly in relief over five innings, was credited with the triumph. He yielded singles in the third and fourth innings and then mowed down the last 12 batters he faced. Herm Wehmeier started for the Tigers but left due to exhaustion after two innings.

After a 37-minute delay because of thunder squalls, Billy Hoeft was summoned from the bullpen. He blanked the Senators in the last inning. The victory was Morgan's first of the season after four setbacks.

3-HITTER FOR WELCH

Monroe Takes 7-2 Victory Over West Monroe Juniors

Tall lefthander L. M. Welch hurled a 3-hitter to give Monroe a 7-2 triumph over West Monroe at the West Monroe playground yesterday in the last regular season contest for both American Legion clubs.

Welch gave up two hits and a run in the second and another safety and talley in the sixth while his teammates pushed over single scores in the second, third and fifth off Wayne Works and rallied with four runs in a wild sixth.

The game left Monroe, the defending state champions, with a 10-2 record for the year. West Monroe is now 7-5. Both teams qualified for playoff spots along with Ruston and Farmerville.

Columbia, which led the loop for some time, was dropped from the standings because of an ineligible player and all its games erased. Monroe had divided two games with Columbia and West Monroe had lost one.

District Commissioner R. D. Farr said yesterday a meeting of the four first division managers would be held at 2:30 today at his office at 247 South Grand to set up the playoff schedule.

Monroe scored in the top of the second when Lanny Johnson led off with a walk and stole second. He went to third on Joe Cage's infield out and scored on James Cromwell's single. They picked up another in the third when Johnson's double drove in Dooley Haddad from second. Haddad had reached first on an error and moved to second on an infield grounder.

West Monroe tallied in the bottom of the second with two out on Charley Dykes' double to left center and Roscoe Holcomb's single to right.

Monroe increased its lead to 3-1 in the fifth. Fourteen-year-old Eddie Kinciad, leading off, gained first on an error and Welch sacrificed him to second. Kincaid went to third on an infield out and scored on Harry Crowe's swinging bunt down the third base line.

Monroe erupted in the sixth with only two hits. Two errors, a hit batsman and 2 wild pitches paved the way to Works' downfall. Ronnie McNabb led off and was safe on an infield fumble. Works threw wild to Cage, permitting McNabb to reach second, and then bounced a pitch off the left fielder's batting helmet. Cromwell then singled to load the bases, still with nobody out.

With Works pitching to Ronnie Sims, McNabb stole home with the first run, the other runners advancing. Sims singled Cage home and Cromwell to third. Works, pitching to Kincaid, uncorked his second wild pitch of the inning and Cromwell scored the third run of the frame.

Works left the game at this point in favor of Aubrey Patton. Kincaid was safe on Tommy Lolley's throwing error and Sims scored. Patton then fanned Welch and got Haddad and Crowe on grounders to short.

West Monroe nicked Welch for another run in the bottom of the sixth. John Moses singled but was forced at second on Jerry Stovall's grounder. Stovall scored all the way from first when Sims' throw to first on Kelton Bacon's grounder was over Johnson's head.

The losers led off the seventh with a baserunner, courtesy of Welch's first walk, but the next three, two of them pinchhitters, went down on flies to the outfield.

Cromwell was the only hitter on either team to get more than one safety. He was 2-3 while Dykes' double was the best blow for West Monroe.

Dodgers Squeeze By Reds, 4 To 3

By CHARLES MAHER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Little Charley Neal drove in the deciding runs with a home run as Los Angeles grabbed a 4-3 decision from Cincinnati.

Neal's homer, his 15th of the season, curved into the right field stands just inside the foul pole, wiping out a 3-2 Cincinnati lead in the fourth inning.

Left-hander Fred Kipp started for the Dodgers and lasted seven innings, gaining his fourth victory in seven decisions. Brooks Lawrence went the distance for Cincinnati and suffered his fifth loss. He has won six.

Big Walt Dropo had given the Redlegs a 2-0 lead in the first inning with a line drive home run over the left field screen. Rookie Dan Morejon was on base with a walk.

The Redlegs got their third run in the third on doubles by Johnny Temple and Frank Robinson.

The Dodgers picked up their first two runs in the third. Neal doubled, took second on Kipp's single and scored when Junior Gilliam blooped a base hit into left. Kipp was sacrificed to third by Pee Wee Reese and scored on Duke Snider's sacrifice fly.

Steve Bilko was on with a walk when Neal smashed his homer.

Paid attendance was 11,740, with more than 28,000 ladies day guests and 15,000 youngsters admitted, free to the Coliseum.

Kipp was pulled with none out in the eighth after Morejon got a single, the first of his major league career, and Robinson was walked. But George Crowe, batting for Dropo, banged into a double play against reliever Clem Labine and Don Hoak popped out to end the threat.

2 CAREY HOMERS

Yanks Shut Out Indians In Bizarre Scrap, 10-0

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees walloped Cleveland 10-0 Saturday in a bizarre game interrupted three times by rain, played under protest by the Indians, and capped by Herb Score's first appearance against the Yankees since his almost tragic accident 14 months ago.

Highlighting the Yanks' fourth victory in the five-game set with Cleveland were Andy Carey's two homers good for five runs and a brilliant relief job by Art Ditmar. Ditmar blanked the Indians without a hit on the 4 2-3 innings he pitched.

But it was Score and Gil McDougald who provided the high drama for the players and the 15,512 fans on the rainy, muggy, long afternoon in Yankee Stadium.

It was the sore-armed pitcher's first effort since June 14 this year.

Ironically the first batter to face him was McDougald and he struck him out on a curve ball. It was Gil's line drive smash to the face that almost cost Herb the sight in his right eye in Cleveland, May 7, 1957. Score was through with baseball for the season.

This year he has been plagued with arm trouble. The 25-year old southpaw injured his salary shoulder April 30th and pitched only three innings after that. Until Saturday he had hurled only 33 innings in six appearances and had a 2-2 record.

He entered the contest in the fifth inning with the Yankees leading 4-0, the field soaked and dark clouds hanging low over the stadium.

Herb pitched three scoreless innings before going out for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. He fanned five, all on curve balls, gave up a single to Elston Howard and walked McDougald the second time he faced him.

In between the rainstorms, the Yankees sewed up the game with two runs each in the first and second innings off starter Don Ferrarese and six runs in the eighth off Don Mossi, fourth and last Cleveland hurler.

Carey's two-run home in the second and his three-run blast in the eighth were the big blows of the Yanks' nine-hit assault.

Ditmar (4-1) was given credit for the victory although he relieved rookie Zack Monroe in the fifth with the Yanks ahead, 4-0, two men on base and one out. Art succeeded Monroe after two time outs for rain.

The official time of the game was 2:59 but the three timeouts alone totaled one hour, 42 minutes. They were for 17, 27 and 58 minutes. In addition the lights were turned on at 3:32 p.m.

Manager Joe Gordon protested after play was resumed following the second time out. This happened in the fifth inning when Bobby Avila came to bat with two on and two out. Rocky Colavito had just flied out in a pinch-hitting role.

As Avila stepped to the plate, Rocky told him it was too slippery in the batting box to keep his footing. Gordon came out, the arguments began and the umpires called back Colavito from the bench. Rocky and Umpire Hank Soar got into a fiery dispute and had to be separated by the other umpires.

Meanwhile the ground crew came out and placed fresh sand atop the mud. Gordon then said Colavito had slipped when he hit the ball and announced the game was being played under protest.

More sand was brought out. The umpires then called Gordon from the bench to approve the conditions. While Gordon was examining the layout, it began to pour again and time was called.

Play was resumed 58 minutes later. Avila fanned to end the inning.

Hewson Beats Herb Elliott In 100 Sprint

LONDON (AP)—England's Brian Hewson spurted in the last 100 yards Saturday to beat Herb Elliott, Australia's wonder miler, in a half mile race that highlighted the British Amateur Athletic Assn. Track and Field Championships.

A crowd of 30,000 in White City Stadium cheered as Hewson, a sub-four minute miler himself, sprinted in the stretch to win by five yards over Mike Rawson, another Briton, with Elliott close behind in third place.

Hewson, a London tailor, was timed in 1:48.3 to better the listed British record for 880 yards. Four other British marks were broken in the International meet, a dress rehearsal for the Empire and Commonwealth Games opening at Cardiff, Wales, next Friday.

Records were shattered in the 440-yard run and 440-yard hurdles, the 3,000-meter steeplechase, and the hop, step and jump.

The half miler was a thriller. Hewson took command in the straightaway as Elliott faded in the final 50 yards and was overtaken by Rawson. Rawson was timed in 1:48.8 and Elliott in 1:49. The 20-year-old Australian's time was his fastest ever for 880 yards.

America's Tom Courtney holds the world mark of 1:46.8 for 880 yards.

Elliott, who has a 3:57.9 mile performance pending for world record recognition, and Hewson, will meet in the Empire Games mile.

The record breakers included Peter Higgins of England in the 440 dash, 47.2; David Lean of Australia in the 440-yard hurdles, 51.2; Britain's Eric Shirley in the 3,000 meter steeplechase, 8:51.2, and David Norris of New Zealand in the hop, step and jump, 51 feet, 4 inches.

Keith Gardner, Jamaica and the University of Nebraska, won the 120-yard hurdles in 14.1.

Cepeda Home Run Again Shatters Braves, 5 To 3

By JACK STEVENSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Rookie first baseman Orlando Cepeda smashed his second game-winning home run in as many days as the San Francisco Giants beat Milwaukee 5-3 Saturday moving within one-half a game of the league-leading Braves.

A crowd of 22,806 saw the Giants triumph behind the seven-hit pitching of left-hander Johnny Antonelli in the first of a three-game series.

Milwaukee's tallies all came on home runs, a solo smash by Joe Adcock in the second inning and a two-run blow by Hank Aaron in the sixth.

San Francisco's five-run outburst in the fifth, capped by Cepeda's 400-foot homer into the right field bleachers with two runners on base, more than made up for their southpaw's gopher balls.

It was Warren Spahn's sixth defeat compared with his 10 victories.

The standing-room-only crowd swelled the attendance for 40 playing dates here to 664,408, surpassing the entire attendance of 653,923 for the Giants' at the Polo Grounds in New York last year. In comparison, the team in the New York last season had 384,656 fans for the opening 40 playing dates.

For Sunday's game with league lead at stake, Braves Manager Fred Haney named Carlton Willey to face the Giants' Al Worthington.

Milwaukee's center fielder Felix Mantilla and Coach John Fitzpatrick were thumbed out of the game by Umpire Augie Donatelli after they argued Mantilla had reach first base safely.

Antonelli struck out 4 and walked 2 in going the distance to record his ninth victory against seven setbacks.

In the fifth, Danny O'Connell and Antonelli, both former Braves opened with singles. Felipe Alou was called out on strikes, but the bases filled when Daryl Spencer drew a walk.

Willie Mays' long fly to deep center brought in O'Connell with Antonelli reaching third. Ray Jablonski singled home run No. 2 and then Cepeda unloaded his 18th homer into the right field bleachers near the flag pole.

Cepeda returned to the line-up Friday after a hitting slump put him on the bench and his 12th inning homer beat Cincinnati, 7-4.

CARDS WIN, 2-0

Mizell Blanks Bucs On 6 Hits

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Vinegar Bend Mizell, sidelined two weeks with a sore back, returned to the firing line Saturday and stifled the Pittsburgh Pirates with a six-hit 2-0 shutout.

Mizell evened his record at 6-6 and gave the Cards their eighth straight victory over the Pirates. Bill Virdon's eighth inning double was the only extra base blow off Mizell.

The Alabama left-hander bested Bob Friend who was trying to notch his 11th victory.

Pittsburgh strategy failed in the third inning and the Cards got their first run.

Friend, ace of the Pirates staff, hurled seven innings allowing both runs and six hits. The chunky right-hander absorbed his 10th loss against a like number of victories.

Dick Stuart, the Pirates rookie with a fantastic minor league home run record, went hitless in three trips, fanning twice.

Snow Is Beaten In Nottingham Tennis Singles

NOTTINGHAM, Eng. (AP)—Ruia Morrison of New Zealand Saturday defeated Louise Snow of Ventura, Calif., 6-2, 7-5, in the rain-delayed final of the Nottingham Lawn Tennis Tournament.

The championship was decided on a hard court when a 90-minute rain made the grass court unplayable.

The tiny New Zealander won the first set easily but had to come from behind in the second. In that one, she trailed 1-3 but pulled ahead to a 6-5 lead. She closed out the match when Miss Snow netted an easy shot.

Cooper, Rose Reach Finals Of Net Event

BAASTAD, Sweden (AP) — Wimbledon champion Ashley Cooper and veteran Mervyn Rose Saturday set up another all-Australian final by defeating Scandinavian rivals in the semi-finals of the Baastad International Tennis Tournament. Karol Fageros of Miami and Heather Brewer Segal of South Africa reached the women's singles final.

Cooper defeated Sven Davidson of Sweden, 6-8, 6-2, 14-12, 3-6, 6-4, in a gruelling, three-hour match played under a broiling sun. Rose, winner of the French and Italian titles this year, easily downed erratic Kurt Nielsen of Denmark, 6-2, 6-3, 6-0.

Miss Fageros outclassed Solveig Gustavsson of Sweden, 6-1, 6-2, and Mrs. Segal upset Pat Ward of England, 6-0, 6-1.

Both singles finals will be played Sunday.

After Cooper had an hour's rest, he and Rose won the doubles final. They swept through Mexico's Mario Llamas and Pancho Contreras, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, in 54 minutes.

700,000 New Cars In Stock Down From March

DETROIT (AP)—The auto industry has about 700,000 new cars in dealer stocks. This is down about 166,000 units from the March 1 high mark.

Just to make sure the inventory presents no problem during the remainder of the model year, the industry already has started ending 1958 model production. Buick finished its 1958 model output a couple of weeks ago.

The makers closing earlier than usual expect to bring out their new models earlier. And the shutdowns will be prolonged to enable retailers to liquidate outgoing models.

Initial production rate on 1959 models will be governed largely by the smoothness with which the outgoing model liquidation program proceeds. No industry executive so far has made any boom predictions for 1959. Some guesses go as high as 5½ million cars. Last year's new car registrations numbered 5,982,342.

There will be much that is new in the forthcoming new models, but the changes will not be sensational. The changes were decided upon as much as two years ago.

So it cannot be said the industry is attempting to correct something that brought buyer resistance to the 1958 lines.

Those who criticize 1958 model styling point to the increasing demand for imported smaller cars, particularly those in the lower price brackets.

Those taking an opposite view say every recession is marked by a swing toward lower priced cars.

Major U.S. auto builders are not rushing into small car production.

But General Motors and Ford have greatly increased imports of their own foreign-built cars, and they are pushing preliminaries to home production of a smaller car.

Indications are GM, Ford and Chrysler will await market developments through most of 1959 before putting smaller cars into production in their U.S. plants.

STOCKS CLIMB—COMMODITIES DIP—The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced to the highest point since Aug. 21, 1957, when it closed at 177.1 from 175.6 a week earlier. The commodity index lost ground for the third straight week, closing at 171.4 from 171.6 in the preceding period. Food and livestock were prominent on the decline. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Bonds Decline Despite Rally

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. government bonds declined again this week despite a fairly brisk rally, inspired by news the treasury had been buying bonds, on Wednesday and Thursday.

The corporate list ended mixed with not much price change in most categories. However, quality domestic bonds generally declined in sympathy with the further retreat in governments while convertible issues gained in line with the upturn in stocks.

Trading in the corporate list picked up from both a week ago, which was only a four-day week, and a year ago. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled $23,806,000 par value compared with $19,154,000 last week and $20,768,000 in the comparative 1957 week.

3RD STRAIGHT WEEK

Market Moves To High Again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market this week digested a mixture of good and bad news and then moved to still another new high for 1958.

It was the market's third straight weekly advance and its best of the current series.

The market's progress has now brought it back to its level of last Aug. 21. At that time the market had retreated from its July peak but had not yet gone into its sharp October tailspin.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $1.50 on the week to close at $177.10, the new peak for this year.

All of the week's gain was made on the last trading session when the market made its best advance in 2½ months. It was a strange, creeping progress the market offered that day. The volume, although a moderately good 2,400,000 shares, was the lightest in ten days.

Classic Wall Street theory would put a bearish interpretation on a rise accompanied by diminishing volume. The fact is, however, that the stock market recently has been flying in the face of certain market fundamentals. The consistent rise in the face of lower earnings and reduced dividends prompted one big Wall Street house to title its latest commentary, "the enigma of the stock market."

The Friday rise was accompanied by a continued stream of defense contracts, favorable news about the steel industry and an over night prediction by Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks that "a definite upswing" seems in the cards for the economy by the fall.

Winter Wheat Supply Biggest Ever For U.S.

CHICAGO (AP) — Time appeared to be running out on wheat futures traders this week while producers continued playing a waiting game with the biggest supply of winter wheat the nation ever has had.

One grain firm commented that so little of the new record winter crop is being sold that dealers would be hard put to produce any evidence the harvest is about half completed.

Since it seems apparent the grain will come to market in dribbles, futures dealers began considering their large commitments, particularly for July delivery, and began bidding prices up on the Board of Trade.

Cotton Futures Higher

NEW YORK (AP)—The cotton futures market backed and filled this week but closed with all deliveries in higher territory.

Active contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange finished at prices ranging from 15 cents to $2.05 a bale higher. The distant months scored the largest advances.

Bullish factors included price fixing, failure of the market to ease on a higher-than-expected official acreage estimate, expectations of a higher loan rate, and a continued delay in Senate consideration of a new farm price support bill.

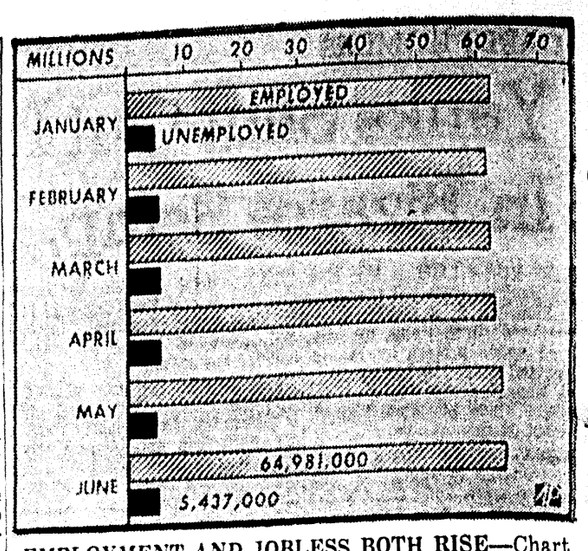
The market backed off later in the week on hedge selling and profit taking.

The official government acreage report, showing 12,402,000 acres in cultivation July 1, exceeded private estimates in the trade by 100,000 to 150,000 acres. Plantings to the present crop were placed at 12,584,000 acres—only 182,000 acres more than the area in cultivation on July 1.

The New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau estimated that if state-wide yields per acre should equal the highest attained in each state during the past five years, a crop of 11,400,000 bales would be in prospect; while the average yield per acre for the entire cotton belt would set a new high of 460 pounds. This would compare with the record high of 417 pounds per acre achieved in 1955.

However, the bureau said, if the state-by-state yields per acre are equal to the average of the past five years, a crop of only 9,600,000 bales would be in the offing. Consensus among traders here is that the current crop will total about 11 million bales, the bureau noted. Estimates range from 10 to 12 million bales.

Exports of U.S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the Exchange's Service Bureau at 62,000 bales vs. 75,000 the previous week and 63,000 in the like week of 1957. Exports for the current season through July 8 were estimated at 5,406,000 bales. This compares with 7,241,000 bales shipped out of the country at approximately the same time last season.



EMPLOYMENT AND JOBLESS BOTH RISE—Chart illustrates increase in numbers of employed and unemployed in June as an estimated one-and-a-half to two million students and recent graduates entered the labor market. The Commerce and Labor departments reported the jobless rise of 533,000 from May sent the unemployment total to a 17-year high. Employment soared by 920,000 over May. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

EXPERTS CLAIM

Housing Money 'Token Figure'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Housing experts said Saturday the 35,000 units of federally aided, low-rent housing which Congress is expected to authorize for the 1959 fiscal year is a purely token figure.

They pointed out that in the past two years local housing authorities have signed up for well-under that volume.

Inasmuch as authorizing more units than will actually be built costs the government nothing, these sources said, Congress probably will continue the 35,000-unit annual authorization as a gesture to public housing advocates.

The figure is contained in the omnibus housing bill, now before Congress. One Capitol Hill source said no fight over the figure would develop because no one expects the government will be called on to underwrite that much public housing.

The 35,000-unit figure was the maximum for federal subsidy commitments for fiscal 1958, which ended June 30, and for fiscal 1957. When the final tally for 1958 is in, officials of the Public Housing Administration (PHA) estimate, it will range between 17,500 and 20,000 units.

Demand Low in '57

In 1957 local housing authorities contracted with the government for subsidies for a scant 3,300 units. This, however, is explained by the 44,000 units in 1956 "which swept the cupboards bare," one official said.

Why, with the government ready to subsidize up to 35,000 units annually for low-income families, is the demand so much less? The question elicited these reasons from several government sources:

—Local authorities, who manage the projects, are choked up with administering developments already in existence or being built. Their work load increased by an estimated 100,000 units between 1953-57. Hence, a PHA official said, they just don't have the manpower and facilities to expand.

Some Cities Land Poor

—In many communities public housing is a highly controversial subject and elected officials feel it is safer to stay away from it. Its critics refer to it as "socialized" housing. As one Capitol Hill observer put it, "the thing is sure to evoke some pretty deep ideological feelings."

—Many cities find themselves "land poor." That is, within the city limits, there is insufficient vacant land on which to build new developments.

In Washington, reported James Ring, president of the National Capital Housing Authority, "we have been badly stymied with regard to sites." Another aspect of the problem, Ring noted, is that zoning restrictions sometimes rule out using vacant land for multiple dwelling buildings.

—The PHA limit of $17,000 a unit for total development costs has proved unworkable in some places, especially where land costs are high. Ring said his agency feels PHA should reconsider this limitation.

The object of the $17,000 top, a PHA official said, is to prevent profiteering at government expense. Even where the proposed contract averages less than $17,000 a unit, he said, "If we see any water in it we throw it out."

UPTURN SEEN

Economy Is In A Summer Lull

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy settled down into a summer lull this week. But while most lines loafed along in a mid-July torpor, signs that could mean a fall upturn flickered on the business horizon like heat lightning in the summer sky.

Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks ticked off some of these favorable indicators in his first news conference since the recession began. They included:

Industrial production on the upbeat. . . .

Employment totals and hours worked per week in the nation's manufacturing industries on the rise again. . . .

Consumers and businessmen more confident than they've been some time.

Weeks volunteered this hopeful forecast: There won't be much change in the economy in the summer vacation months, but "a definite upswing seems in the cards for fall."

Wall Street seemed to share the commerce secretary's optimism. Jolted momentarily by a cut in the Ford dividend, the stock market came back strong and finished with the averages at a new high for the year.

Lending support to predictions of a fall pickup was the prospect of a king-sized "cash-flow" deficit in the federal government's new fiscal year.

Between now and next July, Uncle Sam is expected to pour 12 to 14 billion dollars more into the economy than he takes out in taxes and other revenue. This will plunge the treasury into a sea of red ink.

However, say the experts, if the recession has really touched bottom a cash transfusion of such magnitude should give business a powerful boost.

Defense contracts made news again this week. Boeing Airplane Co. received contracts totaling more than 320½ million dollars for jet bombers and parts; Douglas Aircraft got a $12,613,800 award for rockets for jet fighter planes.

Closer to the consumer front, manufacturers of furniture, typewriters housewares and small appliances reported that new orders are finally picking up.

The latest government statistics tell the story: Total retail spending last month came within one per cent of matching June 1957, but auto sales were down 30 per cent.

Briefly over the business scene: A huge influx of high school and college students into the labor market boosted total unemployment to a 17-year high last month. . . . Steel warehouses report an upsurge of new business in farming areas but little change in areas tied to production of cars and capital goods. . . International Business Machine Corp. announced a 26 per cent jump in earnings for the first six months this year, but said incoming orders were down. . . . The Automobile Manufacturers Assn. is donating $1,350,000 this year to organizations promoting highway safety.

Stock sales in the latest week numbered 12,510,255 shares compared with 10,426,724 in the previous week and 13,245,680 shares a year ago.

Bond sales had a par value of $23,806,500 in the latest week against $19,154,000 the previous week and $20,768,000 a year ago.

'PROUD REBEL'

Romance Drama At Jim Theatre

A thrilling Western adventure drama, Samuel Goldwyn, Jr.'s "Proud Rebel," starring Alan Ladd and Olivia de Havilland, is one of the most exciting and unusual films of the year. The movie opened at the Jim Theatre today. The young producer has come up with an exceptional motion picture set in the rough-and-tumble west of the post-Civil War days. Dean Jagger figures prominently in the cast as a feared sheep rancher, and young David Ladd, Alan's son, turns in a prize performance as Ladd's muted son in "Proud Rebel." A new canine performer named "King" also figures importantly in the film.

The story depicts the efforts of a southerner, John Chandler, played by Alan Ladd, who travels north seeking medical aid for his muted son, David, played by David Ladd. The boy had been struck dumb during the Battle of Atlanta in which his mother died. The father and son travel to Illinois where Ladd has a run-in with sons of a powerful sheep herder, portrayed by Dean Jagger, who attempt to steal the little boy's valuable sheep dog, Lance, ("King"), whereupon Ladd is put in jail as a result of a fist-fight with Jagger. Linnette Moore, played by Olivia de Havilland, a mannish woman who is running a farm alone and attempting to hold off sheep raiser Jagger, befriends Ladd. She pities the boy and, needing a hired man, pay's Ladd's fine. Intrigue, gunfights and romance follow these events bringing the film to a rousing climax in a scene where Ladd confronts Jagger in a gun battle.

For "Proud Rebel," Samuel Goldwyn, Jr., has assembled a notable supporting cast including Cecil Kellaway as a kindly doctor, Dean Stanton and Thomas Pittman as Jagger's sons, Henry Hull as the judge, and veteran performers Eli Mintz, James Westerfield and John Carradine in other featured roles. One of Hollywood's top directors, Academy Award winner Michael Curtiz, directed the film with skill, and set a pace that captures your interest from the opening scene.

Goldwyn, Jr., who brought "The Sharkfighters" and very successful "Man With The Gun" to the screen, scores again with his third production, "Proud Rebel," Filmed in color by Technicolor, and photographed by Ted McCord, the script was written by Joe Petracca and Lillie Hayward from a story by James Edward Grant.

The film is a Buena Vista release.

ANDY GRIFFITH is shown as he appears as a backwoods Georgia draftee in "No Time for Sergeants," the laugh - packed film that is being held over at the Paramount Theatre. Griffith created the role in the long-run Broadway comedy hit.

WARNER BROS.

Natalie Wood Is Unrivaled Queen

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Times have changed in Hollywood. A 19-year-old actress is the undisputed queen of the Warner Bros. lot.

Not since the heyday of Shirley Temple has a youngster dominated a studio as Natalie Wood does.

The authority for Natalie's stature is one of Warner's top executives who prefers anonymity for fear that some older actresses on the lot might pull out his few remaining hairs.

"She's our top box office draw and, I personally believe, our greatest acting talent," he declares.

The studio has backed up that belief with scripts. "Marjorie Morningstar," one of the year's plum parts, elevated her from teen-age favorite to stardom.

Now she's cast for one of the most expensive pictures in Warner history — "The Miracle." Natalie plays the nun role in the Max Rheinhardt classic.

Teen-agers made Natalie a star and she's grateful. But she no longer thinks of herself as "the teen-ager's teen-ager."

"It has been very nice to be called that," she says, "but I never knew exactly what it meant."

She got the title when she became the living symbol of the James Dean cult. Natalie played the romantic lea din "Rebel Without a Cause," starring Dean.

"After that picture," reports the Warner executive, "we found that Natalie's name on the marquee sold tickets. She outdrew some of our biggest stars."

The timing was right, for then came the "Marjorie Morningstar" script.

Natalie, working steadily in the movies since she was 4, has had more experience than many an older star. In fact, the experience has made it difficult for her to assimilate her star status on the lot.

"I honestly don't feel any different now than I ever have," she says. "It's the only life I've ever known."

Natalie has remained relatively unspoiled by show business life, a rarity among former child stars. She credits her parents for this.

"When I was not working," she recalls, "I went to public school with the other kids on the block. My mother never has been the typical stage mother. Neither she nor my father ever forced me to act. I always knew I could quit anytime I felt like it."

Natalie's father, a long-time employe of Warners, probably observed scores of moppet performers and saw to it that his child profited by the mistakes of others.

Natalie has had a way with the so-called inaccessible people of Hollywood. Recently, she and her husband, Robert Wagner, were dining in Palm Springs when a woman came up, introduced herself, gave her best wishes and congratulations on the marriage and then added how much she enjoyed Natalie's work. It was Greta Garbo.

Petite, dainty yet vivacious, Natalie's emergence as a star recalls the great popularity of Janet Gaynor 30 years ago. As Janet hit big in the Clara Bow era, Natalie clicked in the Monroe-Mansfield of big bosom era of the movies.

And she did it in a flaming youth sort of way. It started with the Dean tie-up—and then came Elvis Presley.

Before she was 18, she was scooting around Memphis, Tenn., on the back seat of the rock 'n' roller's motorcycle. She was seen at the night club openings on the arm of Nicky Hilton.

But then came Bob Wagner, 27, long an idol of the nation's bobby-soxers, and Natalie started dating him to the delight of the fan magazine editors.

"I found out I was happiest when Bob and I were out in the ocean fishing, when I could cook for him," she says. On his yacht, away from everybody, romance grew into love — and eventually marriage."

REASONS GIVEN

Recorded Music Is Heard Better Now

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Music recorded more than a quarter of a century ago can be heard now with a great deal more clarity and presence than when it was first put on wax.

There are two reasons for it. One is that engineers can re-record old records on vinyl and, with their modern equipment, perform minor miracles.

They can filter out scratch and do equalization and editing that will take years from a record's age. It won't sound like a modern recording, but in many cases remarkable close to it.

The other reason that music recorded years ago can be made to sound better now is the vast improvement in reproducing equipment available to listeners at home.

One of the best recent examples of re - recording is "Crosby Classics" (Harmony HL - 7094, 12-inch LP, RIAA Curve). Bing Crosby originally recorded the 10 pieces on it in 1932 and 1933.

Include Old Classics

The pieces include such classics as "Please!" "Down the Old Ox Road;" "A Ghost of a Chance;" "My Honey's Lovin' Arms," and "Did You Ever See A Dream Walking?"

It is a good guess that the orchestra in "St. Louis Blues," the last piece on the No. 2 side of the record, is Duke Ellington's and that the accompanying voices in "My Honey's Lovin' Arms" are those of the Mills Brothers.

All 10 tunes were, of course, recorded directly on the masters. Today's technique is to record on tape and transfer the music to masters.

Some perfectionists believe better sound can still be obtained by recording directly on masters. A new Cook record, "Cook's Tour of High Fidelity" (Cook, 1079, 12-inch LP, RIAA curve), does little to settle the argument.

Cook switches from tape to a direct recording on a master in the middle of a tune. Otherwise, the tune contains some elegant sounds of a cat and dog fight, a thunderstorm, fire engines, rifle shots, pouring, swallowing and breaking glass.

Dissertation On Hi-Fi

It also contains a dissertation on Hi-Fi and on record stereo. The recording is as good as Cook's best.

Decca has a new recording of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 6 in F Major, Op. 68 (Pastrorale)," that music lovers may want to check.

Outside of the thunderstorm in the fourth movement, it is some of the happiest music Beethoven ever wrote. This recording, by Igor Markevitch and the Lamoureaux Orchestra of Paris (D,-9976, 12-inch LP, RIAA curve) is technically excellent with an extremely life-like sound.

Fanciers of music in not-too-classical forms frequently like Viennese - type music and the Hungarian Gypsy dances.

Angel has two new records that meet these specifications: "Viennese Mood Music" by pianist Heinz Sandauer and his orchestra (Angel 65035, 12-inch LP RIAA curve) and "Toki Horvath" (Angel 65040, 12 - inch LP RIAA curve).

MGM has released two new popular records that are excellent recording jobs. One is "Hansel and Gretel" with Red Buttons, Barbara Cook, Rudy Vallee, Stubby Kaye and Paula Lawrence. (MGM E-3690, 12-inch, LP RIAA curve.)

The other is "Who's Sorry Now" by youthful singer Connie Francis (MGM E - 3686, 12 - inch LP RIAA curve). The 12 pieces on the record are all old standard which Miss Francis, about 20, sings better than most of the vocalists her age.

AMERIAN POET RELAXES

GENOA, Italy, (UPI)— Ezra Pound, the ex-patriate American poet once accused of treason, rested at a Genovese villa Friday before traveling north to make his home in the Alpine castle of his daughter Mary. Pound arrived here Wednesday aboard the liner Christoforo Colombo from the United States, where he recently was released from a mental hospital.

Efforts To Deport Tokyo Rose Halt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Efforts to deport Mrs. Iva Toguri D'Aquino, known to GIs as Tokyo Rose for her propaganda efforts over the Japanese radio during World War II, have been dropped.

District Immigration Director Bruce Barber said Thursday the federal government canceled the warrant for Mrs. D'Aquino's arrest for deportation because of a U. S. Supreme Court decision.

The court held the citizenship of a soldier who deserted in Germany could not be canceled after he returned to U. S. territory.

Mrs. D'Aquino, now 42, was graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles. She was in Japan visiting relatives when World War II broke out.

Portraitist Is Picture Of Pure Impeccability

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, (AP)— I've just come from a sitting with a famous portrait painter.

But he — the painter, Gerald Brockhurst — was the sitter, not I. I was the one who did the work.

He is a member of the Royal Academy, and a first - water society portraitist — what else can a man be called whose sitters have included the Duchess of Windsor, Clare Booth Luce, Marlene Dietrich, Bernard Baruch, Mellons, Astors and DuPonts?

He lived up splendidly to his role of society painter, too. Though we met at midday, an hour when some men haven't got a tie on, and in his own spacious studio where he could have relaxed, he was the height of the correct and formal.

Five feet six or seven inches tall, he has brown eyes and almost black hair, thinning a bit and combed down meticulously.

He wore a blue suit with faint white pinstripes, a white shirt so stiff with starch it crackled, a blue bow tie with tiny white and red dots, French cuffs that showed just enough to reveal jeweled cufflinks. His shoes were black, a white handkerchief pointed out of a breastpocket, he wore a vest.

And there still remained the distinguished touch of English in speech and manner that he brought over 19 or 20 years ago. He said he had "been" (rhyming with "seen" and not "sin") in this country, or "ova" here, some 19 or 20 "yairs." He spoke not of pennies but pence.

For me, he was a good sitter — a gentleman very much at ease, and master of a complete informality that contrasted effectively with his dress. He spoke with gestures, counting off on his fingers a list of his school studies, wagging his fingertips along his cheeks to indicate a beard, or reaching for my ear to show how his teacher regularly dragged him off to the headmaster for punishment for a naughty caricature made in class.

"I was always being caned," he recalled ruefully, and added, this time without a gesture, "my behind was always pink."

Maybe that's what he's got against pink. When I asked for a definition of the worst kind of sitter, he began by saying:

"The woman with a slightly pink skin, a skin full of tiny freckles." He demonstrated with a portrait of one of his subjects:

"With skin like that, and golden red hair, she is lovely. But I can't see her eyebrows, they fade out against that fair skin. There is no hair line, and she put on no lipstick. Her hair was combed in an even unbroken round about her head.

"Sometimes a sitter is so neutral so characterless on the surface, that even though I may have studied him for an entire sitting, I run the risk of not recognizing him if I see him on the street the next day.

"Nowadays more men are having their portraits painted than women. They are easier, too. Their faces have features, or shape. A woman's beauty is subtler and more elusive. You must remember that a line a hundredth of an inch out of place can change the entire appearance of a mouth. It's fine and exacting work."

Brockhurst planned to be a muralist. World War I left his government no money for that work, and to earn a living he turned to portraits — soldiers going off to the front and painted from life, or lost at the front and painted from photos.

Many museums and private collectors in England, Scotland, and this country own his etchings, but he is best known as a portraitist. He sketches first with a plain ordinary pencil on the bare canvas. He requires 6 to 10 sittings of an hour and a half each. In the winter, New York light allows him no more than two sittings a day, and in the summer potential sitters run off to Europe. It's as seasonal as bricklaying.

Needless to say he is a master at noting the little differences that make up individuality — one shoulder higher than the other because of the habit of resting the weight on one leg, the eyelid that tends to droop over the weaker eye, the sitter who betrays his deafness by always turning his good ear in the direction of the sound.

"Even the tie must be watched" he said. "You tie yours one way, I tie mine another."

In his native land he was, he believes, the highest paid man in his field — it was in England in his youth that a teacher likened him to Botticelli. His fees have run up to $25,000. Other artists sell at prices adjusted to a varying demand; but portraitists make it a rule to have fixed fees, in effect so much per square inch. Brockhurst gets $6,000 for the sitter with hands, the most popular size; $5,000 without hands; down to the knees, $7,500; and full length, $10,000 and up — color, paint and brush certainly earn a man more than black - and - white typewriter, no matter whether you call this portrait of mine full - length or a skimpy without - hands.

The Anchor Book Of Stories Good

THE ANCHOR BOOK OF STORIES. Selected and with an introduction by Randall Jarrell. Doubleday. $1.25.

Editor, teacher, poet, novelist and lecturer—he stirred up a hornet's nest with a National Book Awards speech which I happened to like and which was a stinging antidote to the commercial flavor that I begin to suspect in this prize-winning occasion—Jarrell here in the role of editor has chosen 30 "stories" and told us why.

In many anthologies the least important personage is the anthologist himself; all he wants to do is collect, and he doesn't much care what. Jarrell has a point of view.

One expression of it is a sentence in E. M. Forster's "The Story of the Siren:" "The story of Giuseppe, for all its absurdity and superstition, came nearer to reality than anything I had known before." Jarrell himself writes: "All opposites meet in fiction." And then: "A story is a chain of events," and in general, "There are all kinds of beings, and all kinds of things happen to them; and when you add to these what are as essential to the writer, the things that don't actually happen, the beings that don't actually exist, it is no wonder that stories are as varied as they are."

But even if you don't agree that a story can run from a one-sentence length to the novelette, you still find a fine invigorating freshness about the wide range of this collection.

You would expect the works of recognized contemporary masters the short story in the familiar form however much genius fires it and you get them in selections from Frank O'Connor, Isak Dinesen, Elizabeth Bowen, Katherine Anne Porter and Isaac Babel. But beyond this you get most worthily, the Andersen and Grimm fairy story, the remarkable passage from Saint-Simon called "The Death of Monseigneur," who was Louis XIV's son and heir, the chapter from the Bible (about Jonah), and narrative poems by Robert Frost, Bertolt Brecht, William Blake and—perhaps a better story teller than poet, William Wordsworth.

NEW WORLD WRITING, No. 13. New American Library-Mentor. 75 cents.

Here's a second little book worth a lot more than the cutrate asking price. As usual it contains poems, nonfiction and fiction, and as usual it has names:

Two contributors, James Jones with a short story and Wright Morris with an essay of criticism have been National Book Award winners; Walter Starkie writes about Cervantes; among the poets are Howard Nemerov Helen Coggeshall and Bertolt Brecht; Glendon Swarthout, author of the recent novel "They Came to Cordura," contributes a short story:

A couple of fictional pieces —they happen to come at the beginning where they might discourage you—have a decidedly amateurish cast. On the other hand, one essayist obligingly warned me away in his very first paragraph with a preposterous dismissal of Proust for his "sophisticated absurdity." But there are distinguished pages, in particular Morris' essay on Fitzgerald and Hemingway—of whom he says astutely, "it is love of life that Hemingway's judgment of life reveals;" the story "Ixion" by Swarthout, much worthier than his novel; and the longest and about the best piece, a short story called "Do Not Go Gentle," by Robert R. Kirsch.

The Mideast Of The 1480s In New Book

ONCE TO SINAI. By H. F. M. Prescott. Macmillan. $5.

Friar Felix Fabri, Swiss-born Dominican of Ulm, went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem in 1480, as Miss Prescott, reworking his own account, told in an earlier book. In 1483 this indefatigable Christian went on a second pilgrimage, this time to Mount Sinai as well. As Miss Prescott took him on the outward - bound trip before, she now brings him home from Jerusalem to Glaza across the hazardous desert to Mount Sinai where Moses saw the burning bush and the Law was given to him, up to Cairo and Alexandria, across the Mediterranean and through the Adriatic to Venice and back over the Dolomites to Innsbruck and Ulm, the starting point.

"It was delightful to see these things," said Felix at the baths at Gaza; and though there was danger from nomads, though travel was a hardship and tips were more of a nuisance even than now, he found it delightful all the way. He was a thoroughly good humored man, says Miss Prescott, who, thoroughly good humored herself, has given us an utterly absorbing picture of Mideast people and places 500 years ago.

Lend-Lease 'Vanessa' To Be Staged

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Tradition-proud Salzburg is making a deep bow this year to contemporary American art by copying the Metropolitan Opera's lavish production of Samuel Barber's "Vanessa."

The first European performance of the young composer's latest work will take place Aug. 16 at this year's Salzburg Summer Festival. It will not only have a cast almost identical with the ensemble chosen by Gian-Carlo Menotti for the world premiere, but it will also be directed and conducted by the men responsible for its success in New York.

Soprano Eleanor Steber will sing the title role and mezzo Rosalind Elias the part of Vanessa's niece Erika. Two other Met stars will appear in the Mozart city—Swedish singer Nicolai Gedda (Anatol) and Giorgio Tozzi (the old docotr). The only newcomers are Ira Malaniuk, engaged for the part of the Old Baroness, and Alois Pernersdorfer, who is to play the Major-Domo.

The Metropolitan Opera agreed to put the original costumes at the disposal of the Salzburg Festival authorities, while the stagesetting will be copied from the designs made by Cecil Beaton.

The conductor will be Dimitri Mitropoulos and Menotti will be here to direct the staging of "Vanessa," expected to be one of the highlights of this year's Salzburg program.

For reasons not disclosed by the festival management, the original plan to perform Barber's work in German has been dropped. American music fans, who have been flocking into this old town in ever increasing numbers in the postwar years, for the first time will be able to hear an all-American performance at the stately Festspielhaus.

Strong Poison Good Novel Of Suspense

STRONG POISON By Dorothy L. Sayers (Harper, $3.50). A Lord Peter Wimsey novel of suspense.

When a young woman detective - story writer admits she has purchased arsenic, and when, after a lovers' quarrel, the young woman's lover is found dead of arsenic poisoning, she is destined for trouble.

In point of fact, she was standing trial for her life, when Lord Peter first became aware of her.

She was Harriet Vane.

Shortly after Lord Peter had seen Harriet in the dock, he turned to Chief Inspector Parker and told him, "You're made a mistake, old man. She didn't do it."

Fortunately for Peter's belief in the prisoner's innocence, the jury couldn't agree on a verdict. And as soon as he realized there was to be a retrial he grabbed the counsel for the defense. "You've got another chance. Let me in on this and we'll pull it off."

The counsel for the defense accepted Peter's offer—and Peter met Harriet in her cell, where he promised her he would find the real murderer, and added, "What I mean to say is, when all this is over, I want to marry you, if you can put up with me and all that."

So begins one of Peter's most brilliant jobs of sleuthing, and the start of one of fiction's most romantic love stories.

Attractions On Broadway For Summer

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK—(UPI)—These are the Broadway attractions the summer visitor to New York can have reasonable hope of being available (no guarantee ever):

"Bells Are Ringing," long-run musical starring Judy Holliday. However, it will be closed July 21 through Aug. 10 to give the cast a vacation. Still doing big business, better order tickets ahead.

"Blue Denim," drama about teenagers' problems.

"The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," William Inge's highly regarded drama for which demand is still heavy.

"Jamaica," musical starring Lena Horne, but not available unil Aug. 11 because it was shut down June 30 to give the star a long vacation. Comfortable business, but ticket problem not too great.

"Li'l Abner," musical well into its second year; no ticket problem.

"Look Back in Anger," the John Osborne "angry young man" drama; well down at the box office now after a season's run and may not go all the way.

"Fair Lady" Still Around

"Look Homeward, Angel," major prize - winner of the past season; standing room only so far.

"The Music Man," the season's "big" musical; standing room only.

"My Fair Lady," still playing to standees after close to two and a half years.

"Oh, Captain!" stars Tony Randall and is one of the newer musicals. Doing well but not capacity.

"Romanoff and Juliet," comedy by Peter Ustinov who has dropped out of the leading role for the summer; replaced by Tom Poston. Tickets no problem.

"Say, Darling," a play with music, starring David Wayne, one of the newer shows and a little under capacity.

"Sunrise at Campobello," the play about FDR; standees always.

"Two for the Seesaw," wonderful two - character romantic comedy; Dana Andrews just replaced Henry Fonda; a sell-out since opening.

"West Side Story," the juvenile gang musical; doing well but tickets no big problem.

"Who Was That Lady I Saw You With?" starring Peter Lind Hayes and Mary Healy; short of capacity, but a real laugh show.

New Suspense Mystery Setting In London Fog

THE NIGHT THE FOG CAME DOWN, By John Bude (Ives Washburn, Inc., $2.95). A novel of suspense, set in an English fog.

It was touched off when Mrs. Arkwright, wealthy and bedridden, disappeared. She is the key to this ingenious and intriguing story of crime in a South London suburb.

Before he could solve this baffling crime, Inspector Taunton had to investigate the activities of an oddly related group of people. These included a Polish bricklayer with an expensive new motor bike, his nearly bankrupt employer, a small-time crook just out of prison, and his former girl friend who was in trouble.

The former girl friend was mixed up with the nearly bankrupt employer, whose home was busted up because of her.

All in all, the story is full of suspense and the strange happenings that took place in London the night the fog came down. In it, people are shown with some of the fascinating qualities that involve them unexpectedly in crimes.

DISC JOCKEYS

Pink Sports Car Is A Trademark

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

In his pink sports car, blue suede shoes and black horn rimmed glasses, the disc jockey —variously known as the deejay, tune twirler, waxsmith and platter spinner — has become The Most in the entertainment world.

Teen-agers really dig him and he in turn digs the sponsors, a double dig that is credited with keeping radio alive and prosperous despite mounting competition from television.

Unlike the lillies of the field, the disc jockey both spins and reaps, making anywhere from $10,000 to $500,000 a year for his frothy fission of jabber and jive.

Record companies burden his mailman with an average 200 new releases a week and follow up with a steady barrage of postcards, letters and telegram commending such tunes as "Splish Splash," "Chicken Pickin' Hawk," and "No Chemise Please."

Singing stars, song pluggers, band leaders and a host of musical camp followers make it a point to drop in on his broadcasts for a spate of idle chatter they hope will result in his playing more of their platters.

As a hit maker, the deejay is without parallel. The purchasing power of his teen-aged audience accounts for nearly 90 per cent of all single record sales.

Rock 'n' roll chanter Tommy Sands recently forgot about a scheduled telephone interview with Cincinnati disc jockey Bob Braun. When a second interview was arranged, Sands neglected to take into account a time zone difference and called an hour after the program. Braun refrained from playing any Sands numbers or even mentioning his name.

To make amends, Sands hastened to Cincinnati to make a personal appearance on the Braun show.

Not all entertainers feel beholden to the deejay.

Comic Danny Kaye failed to hit it off in an interview with San Francisco's Don Sherwood, an irrepressible prankster who bills himself as "the world's greatest disc jockey."

When Sherwood asked where he would like to be most of all, Kaye snapped: "In my hotel room, right now," and stalked out.

Even the conservative disc jockeys who soft pedal rock 'n' roll and ego-polishing pranks in favor of soothing music and pleasant patter exert a tremendous influence. Milwaukee's Bob "Coffee-head" Larson, nicknamed for his early morning show, got himself elected county surveyor when a friend added his name to the ballot as a gag.

Because of his combined audience and sales pull, the disc jockey finds himself a controversial figure, damned on one hand as a pied piper of rebellious youth and heavily in demand on the other as a civic do-gooder.

He has been accused of corrupting the nation's musical tastes and in some cases, like Alan Freed's recent Boston musical massacre, of inciting teen-agers to riot and rowdyism.

But in almost the same breath his accusers call on him to head the local Boy Scout or Kiddie Camp campaign, praise him for conducting "record hops" that keep teen-agers off the streets and enlist his participation in civic drivers against litterbugs, jaywalkers, uncurbed dogs and other municipal malefactors.

Thse conflicting appraisals point up a gradual revolution that has taken place among the nation's 3,000 disc jockeys. Rock 'n' roll has been joined by respectability and responsibility.

"It helps in business to be seen doing good things and helping out where I can," explains Detroit's Robin Seymour, who in 10 years went from $40 a week to $40,000 a year.

Similar selective programming has won endorsements for Boston's Bob Clayton from both public and parochial school officials. Sister Angeline, principal of North Cambridge Catholic High, calls Clayton's tasteful, tuneful show "one of the nicest things to happen to our youngsters in a long time."

Another Boston disc jockey, Norm Prescott, has a set of "teen commandments" to guide his youthful followers. Sample: "Don't let your parents down; they brought you up."

The nation's highest paid deejay at $500,000 a year, pleasant, personable Dick Clark successfully invaded television and proved to parents that rock 'n' roll, properly chaperoned, can be no more demoralizing than the Charleston or the Black Bottom, the only slightly less musical. His nationally televised American Bandstand, a 90-minute show originating from Philadelphia, features a bevy of limp limbed teen-agers gyrating about a juke box, presided over by Clark.

With the rise of the independent station, however, many disc jockeys are switching their program emphasis away from teen-agers to the neglected adult audience.

As Mitch Miller, bearded boss of pops music for Columbia Records, told the turntable fraternity at its Kansas City convention: "Youth must be served, but what about some music for the rest of us?"

For the first time since the advent of TV, the rock is getting a solid knocking in many radio quarters. Many deejays now play Guy Lombardo as often as Guy Mitchel. Some actually have sworn off the two-beat bedlam altogether.

A Denver station makes its identification break with the announcement: "This KDEN, stamping out rock 'n' roll." KWK in St. Louis recently played, then smashed every last rock 'n' roll record in its library because it had "alienated too many listeners."

In the race for adult listnership, a whole new breed of deejays has entered the lists. Some, calling themselves "classical commentators," air only serious music and use the "soft sell" commercial. Others specialize in light classical music, show tunes, movie sound tracks and offerings from the hi-fi catalogues.

In Hudson, N. Y., old-time songwriter Gerald Griffin goes after an audience of oldsters by playing the scratchy, hollow-sounding recordings of such bygone stars as Henry Burr and Frank Munn. Houston's KCOH, with a staff of Negro disc jockeys, puts heavy emphasis of hymns, spirituals an religious music.

'Patricia' Is Top Tune Of Week In Poll

CHICAGO (UPI) — A musical female, "Patricia," outdid "The Purple People Eater" this week to take over first place in the to top record poll of United Press International.

"The Purple People Eater" slipped to second place and just barely managed to stay ahead of another feminine threat, "Hard-headed Woman," the third-place occupant.

Three newcomers were aboard the survey—"Everybody Loves a Lover," holder of 11th place; "Fever" sitting in the No. 17 spot, and "Willie and the Hand Jive," 20th place occupant.

The poll is based on retail sales and disc jockey plays of single sides.

IT'S WILD, MAN

Argentine Traffic Takes The Nerve Of A Burglar

By BRIAN BELL

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Planning to visit Buenos Aires, world traveller? Well, a bit of advice: If you drive, don't!

For driving in these parts requires the gall of a burglar, the skill of an Indianapolis winner, the nerves of a tight-rope walker, the reflexes of a major league shortstop and — if you still insist —the life insurance of a Rockefeller.

Traffic is breakneck fast, there are practically no stop lights, it's against the law to blow your horn, and at night everyone drives without headlights. The average Buenos Aires auto is 15 years old and Argentine drivers are among the worst in the world.

It's wild, man, wild!

There is but one traffic rule here. Might is right. The truck is king, the bus prince. They always get the right of way.

It is almost unknown in Argentina for a driver to move to the right so you can pass. When trucks pass on a two-lane road they do so on whim regardless of approaching traffic. Oncoming cars either stop (and pray) or, which is more advisable, take to the shoulder.

The only traffic lights in Buenos Aires are at the main railroad station. There are no stop signs. Theoretically, the car on the right has the right of way. In reality, it's a wild race for the intersection. Blind corners are approached cautiously, if timid; wildly wit ha toot of the illegal horn or a blink of the lights, if brave (on the theory that a fast target is difficult to hit).

It used to be against the law to drive with headlights on; only parking lights were permitted. But the regulation was repealed long ago. Last January the Buenos Aires municipal government ordered everyone to drive with lights.

No one does.

The excuse is that it conserves batteries to drive without lights. The real reason, some say, is that it makes night driving more sporting.

Most car owners have an attachment put on the car which enables them to press the horn ring so that it turns the lights on and off instead of sounding the horn.

Cars can not be imported to Argentina now. When they could, a walloping surtax made their price prohibitive. "One of the low priced three," last year's model, sells for about $12,000. In consequence, almost everyone drives an ancient number. Buenos Aires probably has more model T's, Maxwells and other vintage cars than any other big city in the world. With a maximum speed of 25 miles an hour and brakes that work on a 50-50 basis, they create a mental and a real hazard.

To get a driver's license in your government identity card, a police certificate of good conduct, a certificate of domicile, the car's registration card, then take a physical examination and eye test, have your picture snapped by the city's photographer and go through a driver's test given only at 7 a.m.

And drivers still can't drive. Accidents are a common occurrence. On a straight stretch of two-lane highway I counted three wrecks in a 10-mile stretch, including one in which a truck mowed down four bicyclers.

One nice thing about Buenos Aires driving is the availability of parking places. Except for rush hours, spaces are to be had almost anywhere in the downtown area.

And there aren't many motorcycle cops.

And the traffic isn't very thick because no one can afford a car.

And maybe it isn't such a bad pace to drive in after all.

15-Ton Tank Among Stolen Items At Base

DOTHAN, Ala. (AP)—A 15-ton obsolete tank was included in more than $100,000 worth of government and private property stolen from Ft. Rucker, Ala.

The FBI said yesterday that seven persons, including a 440-pound junk dealer and four soldiers, have been arrested in connection with the thefts.

The tank was hauled away from a firearms range on borrowed military equipment.

The junk dealer was identified as Richard Forsyth, 47, who dealt in scrap metal. The FBI said he operated his business from his home in the Clintonville community near Rucker.

ON YUGOSLAV COMMUNISM

Chinese Demand 'Extreme Fight'

BERLIN (UPI)—Red China demanded Saturday that the world-wide communist movement open an "extreme fight" against Yugoslav national communism, which it termed the product of "american imperialism."

Dung Bi-Wu, a member of the Chinese Communist Politburo, issued the call to battle in a speech before the East German party congress in East Berlin.

The speech rivaled that of Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev at the Congress Friday in which every epithet in the communist book was hurled at Yugoslavia and its president, Marshal Tito.

Dung was joined in his attack by Jerzy Morawski, a representative of the Polish Communist Party who assailed Titoism as "false and damaging."

Kadar Speaks

Hungarian communist leader Janos Kadar took the floor to justify the execution of former Premier Imre Nagy and three other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian uprising.

He also called for an "implacable fight" against Yugoslav theories, but said Hungary wanted "good neighborly relations" with Yugoslavia.

Up to now Poland has been closest to Yugoslavia among the communist nations in point of policy.

Dung flatly accused Yugoslavia of backing the Hungarian revolt of 1956 which eventually was crushed by the Soviet Red army.

"During the Hungarian counter-revolution, Yugoslav communist leaders played the despicable role in the truest sense of the word of an interventionist and agitator," Dung said.

A-to-Z Revisionist

He denounced Yugoslavia as "revisionist from A to Z" and "a product of the policy of American imperialism."

"Communists in all the world must carry out an extreme fight against modern revisionism to strengthen the unity of the international communist movement and defend the purity of Marxism-Leninism," he said.

Morawski, a secretary of the Polish Central Committee, used somewhat milder terms.

He said Yugoslavia's policies do not serve the cause of proletarian internationalism and the cause of peace and socialism and therefore are "false and damaging."

Rites Set For Mrs. Gordon

Mrs. W. Stewart Gordon, member of a prominent Mississippi family, died at the home of a daughter here late Friday night following a four-month illness.

Death came at the home of a daughter, Mrs. S. H. Cararas, 1114 North 5th, Monroe.

She was born in Meridian, Miss., the daughter of Joseph P. Wetherbee, pioneer lumberman, and in recent years had resided in Shreveport where she was a member of St. Marks Episcopal Church.

Her husband was the late William Stewart Gordon.

Besides her daughter, survivors include two brothers, Clem Wetherbee, Ruston, and Alex P. Wetherbee, Corpus Christi, Texas and three grandchildren.

Funeral services are scheduled here at 1:30 p.m. today at Peters Funeral Home with the Rev. J. C. Wattley and the Rev. Jim Marshall officiating. At 11 a.m. Monday another service is scheduled at the Bradford Funeral Home in Biloxi, Miss. Burial will be in Southern Memorial Cemetery in Biloxi.

The theme of the 1958 New York State Fair, to be held at Syracuse Aug. 29-Sept. 6, is "the years ahead."

DARBAR SET

A watermelon party and darbar will be held by Swami Santha No. 102, Nomads of Avrudaka, at 6:30 Friday night in Bernstein park.

Rani Bessie Haile has requested all Nomads and officers to attend the event and to wear fez.

MODELLING—Jim Morgan of West Monroe, returned a lost wallet to its owner and as a "gift" for his honesty, he will receive this painting for which he is modelling. The painter is Henry Logan Jr. also of West Monroe. The wallet belonged to Logan's father. (Staff Photo by Bill Coleman)

FOR W. MONROE BOY

Honesty Reward Portrait In Oils

By EARL COWAN
Staff Writer

The slogan "honesty has its rewards" did not occur to a young West Monroe boy a month ago when he sought to return a wallet that he had found.

The boy, Jim Morgan Jr., 6, said that it all started when he saw a man getting out of a car and noticed that he had dropped his wallet.

Jim is being rewarded with a full length painting of himself. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Morgan. The work is being done at their home which is located on the New Natchitoches Road in West Monroe.

He said that when he noticed that the man dropped his wallet, he yelled, "Man, you dropped your wallet." Jim explained that the man apparently didn't hear him and went on.

"I took the wallet into the store (grocery near Jim's home) and gave it to the lady. I gave her a discription of the man and she said that she knew him and would return it."

Forty-five minutes later the wallet was returned to the owner, H. K. Logan Sr.

Appreciation

Logan's son, Henry Logan Jr., wanted to show his appreciation to the young boy for his honesty and the best way that he knew how was to present Jim with a painting of himself.

The painting was begun two weeks ago and the artist said that it is not nearly finished.

Logan, who works during the day, is a free-lance painter on the side and is doing this painting of Jim in his spare time.

He began painting during World War II, during his tour in the Air Force in the South Pacific Islands. He said that his first paintings were land-scapes and sea-scapes.

Jim's ancestoral background revealed that his great-great-great-grandfather was Don Juan Filhoil, the founder of Monroe.

Logan said that Jim is an entirely new experience for him. "I've never attempted to paint a child before," he said.

"I must say I find him a better model than I am a painter. What a guy! He is only six years old and has the manners of an adult. It is rare to find a child of his years who is articulate, as well as charming and intelligent. It's a treat to paint him."

Unsound Case For Aid Funds Cited By Two

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two members of the Senate Appropriations Committee said Saturday the administration has failed so far to make a sound case for restoring all of the heavy House cuts in funds for President Eisenhower's embattled foreign aid program.

Sen. John C. Stennis (D-Miss) said, "I'm not going to vote in favor of putting any of the cuts back."

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R-SD) added in an interview that he would be willing to go only part way—mainly in the areas of military aid.

The administration is working hard—and building up some support in the Senate — for raising the $3,078,000,000 in actual money voted by the House to the $3,675,000,000 ceiling authorized earlier by Congress.

The Appropriations Committee will continue hearings on the aid program all next week. No Senate floor action is expected before the week after that.

Mundt predicted the committee would approve "some restoration but will not give the administration what it wants."

The House cut 200 million dollars from funds for military aid and so-called "defense support."

Stennis said he was familiar with the administration arguments but would vote to sustain the house cuts.

Another committee member, Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D-La), has declared his all-out opposition to any restoration. But Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex), also on the committee, has called for restoring all or most of the cuts.

Alaska To Help Other 48 States

(Editor's Note: Former newspaperman Rep. Leo O'Brien (D-N.Y.) was a main mover in Congress' passage of the Alaska statehood bill. In the following dispatch he tells what he believes the 49th state will mean to the U.S.A.)

By REP. LEO O'BRIEN
(Written for United Press International)

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Alaska, as the nation's newest and largest state, will serve as a gigantic "shot in the arm" for the other 48 states.

It will attract from the north, south, east and west countless eager young people, anxious to grow with the "Great Land."

In return, it will pump into our economic veins its vast treasures of oil, timber, coal, natural gas and other fantastic resources.

Within 5 years, I am confident, the population of Alaska, now 220,000, will pass the million mark. And that will be only one resident per 385 acres or a little over one per square mile.

These are among the reasons that I, a congressman whose district lies closer to London than to Fairbanks, sponsored the bill which made Alaska a state and fought for it during 18 torrid months.

Some, from states with populations many times that of Alaska, turned up their legislative noses at the idea of giving a state with 220,000 people two United States senators. I am proud that the congressional delegation of my own state of New York, with the largest population of all, cast a majority of its vote for Alaska statehood.

Those legislators felt, as did I, that New York had prospered from the admission of each of the 35 states which followed the original 13 into the Union and that Alaska would not and could not be an exception.

My home city, Albany, backed me to the hilt in the fight and that added the last sweet drop to the cup of achievement.

Those who fought for the statehood bill were not pursuing a dream or a will-o-the-wisp. We had cold, hard facts to back our emotional pleas.

The final sucessful drive for statehood began without fanfare in late September, 1955; when seven members of Congress, including two women, went to Alaska as members of the subcommittee on territorial and insular affairs, which I have the honor to head.

There was a temptation to fish and hunt in that glorious territory, but we worked instead, morning, afternoon, and nights. We traveled thousands of miles, from Juneau to the very edge of Siberia and we took down the voice of the people expressed in 600,000 words of testimony

We had our case; but the big job was ahead; the job of convincing Congress, after 42 years, that the time was now.

Looking back upon the long hard road we walked, I think I see the fork we took that led us to the summit. It was the firm decision that statehood for Alaska must stand on its own merits, without relation to the issue of statehood for Hawaii.

That decision I could carry out because statehood bills for both territories rested in my committee. So, though I favored and still favor statehood for Hawaii, I left that bill back and Alaska rode alone. Any other decision would have cost us the victory.

What about Hawaii? Will it follow Alaska into the Union and become the 50th state?

Because of the wave of excitement and public approval that greeted the admission of Alaska, advocates of statehood for Hawaii clamored for action now.

MONROE MORNING WORLD

July 13, 1958

Arriving at Northeast Louisiana State College are the first lady of the campus, Mrs. George T. Walker, wife of the new president, and daughter, Ellen, a high school student. The Walkers also have a son, George Jr., who will enter college this fall.

Mrs. G. Fred Beckett and her children, DeWitt and Mary Eve, are shown at their new home on Beachwood Drive shortly after their arrival in this city. Formerly of Monroe, the Becketts have lived in Oklahoma for several years before their return.

AT RIGHT: Wed July fourth, were Miss Peggy O'Neil Long and Billy H. Hartness of this city. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Long of Bosco, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hartness of Monticello, Ark.

The marriage of Miss Marilynn McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry McCormick, and Luther Allen Burney, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Burney of Swartz, was solemnized on July third, at the College Place Baptist Church.

Mrs. Hugh Lamensdorf is the former Miss Louise Doernberg. Her marriage took place the afternoon of July sixth. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Stewart J. Doernberg and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Lamensdorf. Rabbi Jacob Lantz heard their vows at Temple B'Nai Israel.

Marriage Vows Are Said By Miss Harkey And Philip B. Watson, Jr.

Marked with beautiful dignity and solemnity was the ceremony at the Lake Providence First Methodist church on Saturday, June 28, uniting in marriage Miss Allein Harkey, daughter of Mrs. Haynes Louis Harkey and the late Mr. Harkey, and Philip Brooks Watson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Brooks Watson of St. Joseph.

The Rev. Thomas Major Lancaster of Shreveport, heard the exchange of vows in the double ring ceremony, in a candlelight service at 5:30 in the afternoon.

Enhancing the beauty of the church was a decoration of white and green. The prayer rail was covered in white and looped in southern smilax. The surrounding floor.ng was carpeted in white to designate the area for the bridal party. Potted palms interspersed the wrought iron candelabra and floor baskets of white gladioli, stock and fern. Full white satin bows and gladioli clusters marked the family pews. Casting a soft glow over the picturesque setting were the countless tall white cathedral candles held in branched candelabra in graduated height.

The wedd ng music was presented by Mrs. Jack L. Holt, organist, who played several of the bride's favorite numbers, accompanied Miss Linda Fields, of Shreveport, who sang "Through the Years," prior to the entrance of the bridal party, and "The Lord's Prayer," as a benediction at the conclusion of the ceremony. The traditional wedding marked the entrance and departure of the wedding party.

Miss Katherine Pittman, of Lake Prov dence, served the bride as maid of honor.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. John Allen Bernard of Lafayette, Mrs. Robert Eugene Lee of Baton Rouge, and Miss Catherine Barfield and Miss Virginia Hider, both of Lake Providence.

Their dresses were identical, of sherbet green silk organza, fashioned with draped off - shoulder neckline and the back fullness falling into a graceful curved cowl. Polished cotton folds, tied in a jaunty bow at the back, marked the beltline of the deep hemmed bouffant skirts. Their dainty head - dresses of silk net, dotted with rhinestones, were framed on wired matching velvet clips and circled to the front in short face veils. Each carried a shower bouquet of Majest c daisies entwined with white ribbon.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother, Haynes Louis Harkey Jr., of Monroe, who gave her in marriage. She wore an exquisite gown of imported silk organza over taffeta. Tucked organza framed the neckline and brief sleeves. The wide sweeping skirt was appliqued with lace panels and rose medallions, lending an aura of glittering elegance to the bouffancy which flowed into the chapel train. She wore three - quarter length kid gloves and a single bridegroom, which matched the earrings given at graduation. She carried out the traditional something old, something new.

Her misty veil of illusion was attached to a coronet of pearl studded organza. She carried a sculptured bridal bouquet of stephanotis and white orchids.

Serving the bridegroom as best man was his brother William Wade Watson, of St. Joseph. Groomsmen were Edwin McGlasson of Lake Charles, Richard Howe of Mayfield Ky., Robert Boudreau, of Lake Charles, and Ryan Sartor of Monroe. Ushers and candlelighters were King Trieschmann and Wayne Trieschmann, both of Lake Providence.

Reception

A reception at the Legion Home on Bayou Tensas followed the ceremony. Mrs. Harkey, the bridegroom's parents, and the bridal party stood within the French doors of the spacious lounge, to receive the guests. Mrs. Harkey chose to wear for her daughter's wedding, a waltz length gown of mist blue, combining lace and silk. The lace bod ce with V neckline and bracelet length sleeves, was joined to a skirt of full flowing silk. Her small lace hat and slippers were in the same tone as her dress, and her shoulder corsage was an orchid.

The groom's mother was attractive in a gown of pale blue chantilly lace over taffeta, featuring a portrait neckline and sheer tulle back panel which began at the waistline and drifted the length of the skirt. Her small jeweled hat was of harmonizing shade, and she added a shoulder corsage of orchids.

The bride's table was covered with an exquisite linen cut work cloth, with overskirt of draped nylon tulle. The tiered wedding cake was surmounted with a nosegay of stock and based with circled lace doily, from which had been placed pyramidal sprays of stock on fern. The bride's bouquet was the central decor. Twin refreshment tables were identical in overlay of lace edged Madiera cloths, branched silver candelabra from which extended a garland of white and green carnations to circle the base of the crystal punch bowls, at which Mrs. William Wade Watson of St. Joseph and Miss Betty Haynes Wilder of Ruston presided. There were silver trays of individual cakes and compotes of white crested mints.

Mrs. Crawford Allen Rose and Mrs. George Turner H.der had welcomed the guests at the entrance door. Mrs. King Trieschmann registered the guests in the bride's book; serving the cake was Mrs. Haynes L. Harkey Jr., of Monroe, assisted by her young daughter, Virginia, and son Louis, and Sheila Harkey and brother Tom Harkey, children of the Gilbert Harkeys of Shreveport.

The bride chose for travel on the wedding trip to Mexico City, a two piece dark brown cotton tailleur designed along semi-sheath lines. It was complemented by a small feathered hat in shades of dark brown, bone and coral. Her accessories were in brown with wrist length gloves of bone color. Her shoulder corsage was of the orchids from her bouquet. Miss Catherine Barfield caught the bride's bouquet as they departed in a shower of rice.

Upon their return from the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Watson will be at home in an apartment in St. Joseph, where he is engaged in the practice of law.

Louise Doernberg Bride Of Hugh Lamensdorf

In a bridal setting of white gladioli, white mums and lily of the Nile, enhanced by spiral candelabrum, Miss Louise Doernberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart J. Doernberg, and Hugh Lamensdorf exchanged their wedding vows July sixth, at three o'clock in the afternoon, at Temple B'Nai Israel. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Lamensdorf of Shelby Mississippi. Rabbi Jacob Lantz heard the vows.

Leon Hammond played organ selections while the guests were assembling. Maynard Wilzin of Greenville, Miss., soloist, sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride, escorted by her father, was a lovely figure in a gown of airy white Chantilly lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a sabrina neckline and brief sleeves. The entire lace bodice was encrusted with dainty pearls and iridescent sequins. A wide crushed belt of white taffeta formed a dramatic back sweep ending in the form of a two-tiered bustle. The skirt was of white taffeta ending in a chapel train. Gloves of white taffeta ended in a point at the wrists. Her finger tip veil of illusion was attached to a Juliet cap adorned with pearls and sequins. She carried a colonial bouquet of lily of the valley and white orchids studded with delicate pearl ornaments.

Maid of honor for her sister was Miss Sandra Jo Doernberg. Matron of honor was Mrs. Jerry Bernat and bridesmaids were Miss Fran Guthrie, Miss Marianna Altick, Mrs. Morris Levy of New Orleans, and Miss Gaye Olcott. Their gowns were of aqua silk organza over taffeta. The flared princess skirts of taffeta joined to bodices with tiny shirred tucks. Their flowers were cascades of yellow glamellias and ivy tied with yellow ribbons. They wore caplets of aqua satin with nylon aqua veil.

Sally Doernberg of Spencerville, Ohio, served her cousin as flower girl. She wore a gown identical in material and color to the bridesmaids. Her headdress was a bandeaux of nylon tulle, and she carried an old fashioned bouquet of yellow roses.

Jerome Lamensdorf served his son as best man. The groomsmen and ushers were Sydney Rothchild, of New Orleans, Ed Kossman Jr., of Greenville, Miss., Dave Gundfest Jr., of Little Rock, Ark., Barry Lewis of Houston, Texas, Bobby Jay Doernberg of Spencerville, Ohio, and Benjie Nelken of Greenville, Miss.

Mrs. Doernberg chose for her daughter's wedding a pink chiffon sheath with shirred bodice and draped back panel. Her hat was pink velvet bandeaux and veil and her corsage was of pink cymbidiums.

The bride's grandmothefr, Mrs. J. M. Doernberg of Cincinnati, Ohio, wore a navy lace and chiffon model. At the waistline was a crushed cummerbund of chiffon ending with a side drape. At her shoulder was a white carnation corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a peach silk organza model with embroidered lace panels on either side of the skirt. Her hat was a small leaf design matching the embroidery of the dress. Her corsage was of white pholaenopsis surrounded by pearl leaves.

Mrs. B. Lamensdorf of Shaw, Miss., the bridegroom's grandmother, wore a navy eyelet embroidered dress and a corsage of white carnations.

Reception

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Bayou DeSiard Country Club for the newly married couple.

The bridal party and parents received the guests in the lounge.

A round table covered with white satin and overlaid with nylon net cloth, held a beautiful four tiered wedding cake adorned with white swans, lily of the valley and wedding bells. The top of the cake held three wedding bells from which flowed lilies of the valley and tiny white roses.

Mrs. J. L. Hirsh of Birmingham, Ala., cousin of the bride, wearing a champagne colored silk organza and lace dress, and Mrs. Robert Doernberg of Spencerville, Ohio, aunt of the bride, wearing a beautiful blue chiffon, served wedding cake. Miss Minnette Smith presided at the guest book.

The refreshment table was overlaid with a pink satin cloth and held a central decor of white gladioli in a silver epergne. At either end of the table was a silver punch bowl. AIR CONTROL RULES BLAMED

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Air Force has blamed inadequate air traffic control rules for the collision of a military jet plane and a Capital Airlines Viscount near Brunswick, Md., on May 20 in which 12 persons were killed. The report to the Civil Aeronautics Board, which is investigating the accident, criticized flight rules which permitted the jet to operate on the "see and be seen" visual flight principle in the same air space used by the Viscount.

Miss Marilynn McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry McCormick, became the bride July third, of Luther Allen Burney, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Burney. The Rev. T. Earl Ogg, assisted by the Rev. Connie Ward, performed the double ring ceremony at 7:15 p.m. at the College Place Baptist Church.

Questions And Answers

Q. — I would like some help with a color scheme for my kitchen. The rubber tile floor covering is blue and white and the counter tops are blue. What colors would you suggest for the walls, cabinets, inside cabinets, curtains and upholstery for the round built-in breakfast booth?

A. — A good color scheme for your kitchen would be to paint the walls and cabinets pink, inside of the cabinets, blue. You could get curtains with a pattern on a white background and upholster the breakfast booth in white leather or plastic.

Q. — I would like some advice on selecting a table and chairs for my kitchen. The walls are green, the cabinets are maple and the floor covering is green with touches of rosy red.

Why not get a round table and captain's chairs in maple to match the finish of the cabinets in your kitchen?

YOUR PROBLEMS

Seventeen-Year-Old Girl Is A Problem

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I was separated from my husband when my daughter was three. I've tried to raise her to be a decent, respectable girl, but I failed somewhere. Now I need help.

She is 17. Last year she quit school to go on the road with a magazine crew. Five months ago she came home pregnant — and a wedding ring. She promised if I would stand by her, she'd straighten around.

The baby is three months old, today — the healthiest and most beautiful little girl I've ever seen. My laughter has started to run wild again. She "disappeared" for four days last week. Last month she lost her job and hasn't even looked for another one.

I'm in poor health and have a bad heart condition. I can't take care of her baby and hold a job, too. She has no feeling for the child, won't even bathe or feed the little thing. If I should die of a heart attack, the baby would starve to death and I'm not exaggerating. Please tell me what to do. I'm at the end of my rope.—DESPERATE GRANDMOTHER

When I read letters like yours, and think of the thousands of childless couples who would give anything to have a youngster in their home, I could weep.

This child should be legally adopted by a family who can give her the love and care she needs. There are many excellent agencies who can help you. Contact your clergyman or the Family Service Bureau.

Since your daughter cares nothing for the child, she can do her one last service — that of taking legal steps to insure the little girl of a decent life.

To learn the difference between a marriage that "settles down" and one that "gets dull," send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Out of town guests have been the inspiration for a number of small parties this week. . . . Summertime, living-is-easy parties with plenty of time for visiting with old friends one hasn't seen in months or, sometimes, years.

The PEYTON PARKERS of Baton Rouge were here over the week end of the Fourth. Along with the LYN MEREDITHS, they stayed at the FRED HIGHTOWERS' farm east of town on Highway 80. Saturday night JERRY HIGHTOWER was host to a barbecue in their honor. The large screen porch of the hospitable country home was the scene of the party. Guests included about twelve couples, mostly old friends of Peyton's from high school days.

Guests of the JACK ROGERS have been their nieces, LIZA, ANN and SALLY JARRELL. The girls are the daughters of DR. and MR. LEE JARRELL of Alexandria. On the Fourth they were honored at a party attended by a small number of their young friends. The children went swimming and then were served luncheon on the patio. Flags and other decorations carried out the patriotic theme. Box lunches were labeled with each child's name.

ROSEMARY ROACH of New York has been the guest of the HAROLD WOODS, JR., for the past two weeks. She was honored at a lovely home luncheon by JUNE M'HENRY on Wednesday. The hostess used a pale pink cloth, centered with a pink and white arrangement in a silver tureen. Pink roses, dwarf gardenias, and summer crysanthemums were the flowers. A delicious lobster salad was served to six guests.

Another visitor from New York is SARA TERZIA, who is here with her mother DAISY TERZIA . . . The JACK TERZIAS honored Rosemary and Sara with a dinner party Saturday night. Caladium and crape myrtle were used on the table. Chicken saute with wild rice dressing and peach chiffon pie were served to about nine guests.

Rosemary and Sara were also guests of honor at a luncheon given by CAMILLE WOOD on Tuesday in the private dining room of the Bayou DeSiard country club. A willow green cloth covered the table which was centered with yellow day lilies and variegated eunonymus. Placecards were fashioned like miniature hat stands complete with hat—a reference to Sara's recent promotion to assistant buyer at Lord and Taylor. Gifts wrapped in pale yellow paper marked the places of the honorees.

Sara was wearing a black and white check dress fashioned with a trapeze back and fitted front. . . . Gold buttons accented Rosemary's black and white pink stripe cotton. . Another out of town guest at this party was BETTY NOE striking in a beige silk chemise.

PAT RILEY and EVELYN MOORE invited Rosemary and Betty to lunch on Wednesday along with JACKIE WOODS and ANNA CLAIRE SEYMOUR. The round table in the main dining room of the Bayou DeSiard country club was covered with a dark green cloth and centered with pink roses. The tri-salad plate, featuring shrimp, chicken, and frozen fruit salads, was served with tortoni for dessert.

FRANCES M'HENRY had a luncheon at home for Betty on Thursday. Gardenias and magnolias were used as decoration. Crab meat and mushrooms au gratin was the main course with peach ice cream and cake for dessert. The eight guests played bridge after lunch.

The JIM PHILLIPS of Richardson Tex. have been here with her parents the PAUL KELLERS. They came in last week-end went on to Little Rock for a few days and are back this week-end to stay until Thursday. . . . Joining them here yesterday were Mildred's sister BETTIE CAPLIS, and her family from Shreveport. In celebration of her daughter's visit Lenora Keller had a few of Mildred's friends in for bridge and conversation Monday night. Dessert and coffee were served to the card players and the other guests. Winners at bridge were GLADYS MURPHY high; and JEAN HAMMONS, low. SNOW ARMSTRONG won the "card bingo."

Celebrating the installation of their new air conditioning, the FRED HUENEFELDS, JR., have had four dinner parties. Last week end, the house was decorated with yellow cannas and caladium leaves. Friday night's party was centered around the barbecue pit, where Fred prepared the steaks "Texas style" on the coals. Meringue shells filled with fresh peach ice cream completed the menu served to six couples. . . . Seven couples enjoyed Saturday night's gathering. Hamburgers and a choice of homemade cakes were served early. Bridge tables were set up after the meal, with JEANNIE DOWNING and TOMMIE SUE SARTOR winning the prizes. . . . Wednesday night's guests were fourteen college girls, friends of Jean's sister, SYLVIA GENTRY. A hamburger supper preceded the talk-fest. . . . And last night it was barbecued steaks again, with twelve guests.

The redecoration is proceeding apace at the Lotus club. A new coat of paint in a room is like a new dress for a lady —and new draperies like a new hat! . . . Among the ladies seen lunching at the Lotus club this week were FLORA POTTS, FRANCES HUEY, RUTH BROWN, EVE BRADFORD, STELLA REID, LOUISE TROUSDALE. . . . JOSEPHINE M'CRANEY was telling of her plans for a trip to Texas to visit relatives. . . . Looking bright and gay was EVELYN JANE CRITES, in lipstick red linen with a matching hat. Evelyn Jane and her children are visiting her parents, the CURTIS SMITHS.

Stars and stripes were much in evidenct at JAN ADCOCK's supper party on the Fourth. Red ribbon streamers across the white cloth made the "stripes," while the "stars" were candle - holders. Crossed flags and red, white, and blue candles completed the centerpiece. The table held all the fixings and trimmings for hamburgers, and each guest cooked his own. Dessert was homemade apricot ice cream served with chocolate cupcakes . . . Following supper, the group danced and played charades. Twenty - one members of the high school set attended . . . Jan and her parents, the JIM ADCOCKS, are in Point Clear, Ala., this week end.

About eighty members of the junior high set gathered at NANCY TALBOT's for a patio party honoring newcomers MARY EVE and DEWITT BECKETT. Co-hostesses were CONNIE YANCEY, ARDEN ANDERS, and JUDY SEARCY. This was also a going-away party for Nancy, who leaves today for Camp Waldemar in Hunt, Texas.

The Talbot patio looked lovely, with varicolored bubble lights gleaming above the polished flagstones. Also looking lovely were the young ladies . . . Connie wore a pink and white candy stripe polished cotton . . . Nancy chose navy organdy with a white collar . . . White lace trimmed Arden's yellow organdy . . . Mary Eve was in pink chintz trimmed with lace and rhinestones . . . while Judy was wearing white nylon dotted Swiss with a bright blue sash. Dancing filled the hours between 7 and 9:30.

Another going - away party for the Waldemar campers was that given Thursday by CARRIE M'KENZIE and CAROLYN THOMPSON at Carrie's home. Guests of honor were SUSAN and JANE SHERROUSE, Carrie's granddaughters and Carolyn's cousins. Pink crepe myrtle, magnolias and greenery were used in decoration. The girls wrote notes for Susan and Jane to open and read after they had left for camp. Soft drinks and finger food were served to about fifth girls.

Other girls in the Waldemar group leaving this morning were LAURA ALLEN, JAN TOUCHSTONE, AMANDA COBB. MERRIE JO SIMONTON, LINDA CROW, SUSAN JOHNS, and LINDA KELLER.

It's a girl — their second — for the ELDRED HARPS of Napoleonville. The baby was born in Monroe July 7. The mother is the former Emrey Liles of Monroe and Bastrop. Here to meet her new niece was MRS. JOE BROYLES of Leesville — the former MONICA LILES.

Word was received from some of our travelers this week. In Jackson Hole, Wyoming, at the time of writing were CARRIE DEE DREW, FRANCES FLANDERS, BETTY BIEDENHARN, and HAZEL MITCHELL. They were to go on to Sun Valley, Idaho, from there, and were scheduled to arrive in San Francisco today for the librarians' conference next week.

Also seeing the sights in the Rocky Mountain area are MAGDALEN AMMAN and ROSEMARY and LAURA LEAH WORSHAM. The girls left on the Fourth, with plans to visit Yellowstone Park, Wyoming, and Estes Park, Colorado. They will be gone another week.

MRS. E. B. TODD is in New Orleans visiting her daughter, HELEN SMITH. She will be gone a month.

The CURTIS EMERYS of Fayetteville, Ark., (she is the former Gloria Ray) have been visiting the H. C. RAYS, JR. With them were their children, ROBERT and DIANA. Gloria has been entertained at a number of informal parties during her stay here.

Quite a number of our people have been vacationing in Panama City, Florida. The GARLAND SHELLS and the LON HEUERS and their children made up one party, while in another group were the O. C. RODDEYS and the JOHN ATKINSONS. The Shells and Lon came home the first of the week, leaving Martha and the children with her parents, the Roddeys. Everyone came in yesterday.

The A. V. SCIROS and daughter, CAROL ANN, and MRS. CHRIS SLAVANT have returned from a wonderful vacation in California. While in Los Angeles, they were guests of CORPORAL and MRS. JAMES E. SLAVANT and their son, MICHAEL EDWARD. The Slavants are stationed there with the Marine Corps.

Arriving today from Lima, Ohio, will be RABBI and MRS. HENRY SANDMAN and their daughter, SHARRON ROSE. They will visit the PERCY SANDMANS, who are making the acquaintance of their granddaughter for the first time.

Here are two poems by Ogden Nash, suitable for the season. First, his "Song of the Open Road" for vactioners:

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree.
Indeed, unless the billboard fall
I'll never see a tree at all.

And here's another, this time aimed at the ladies and their vacation attire:

Sure, deck your lower limbs in pants;
Yours are the limbs, my sweeting.
You look divine as you advance—
Have you seen yourself retreating?

These are poems?

We're in for a season of plush, longhair fabrics, with mohair leading the way. One New York manufacturer shows a sleeveless mohair jumper, worn over a long-sleeved wool jersey dress. Both inner and outer garments are of a soft, dull green. Designer Bonnie Cashin shows the mohairs in giant, horse-blanket plaids — suggested only for the very slim figure, unless you want to look big as a horse.

•MRS. ALVIS DOYLE STEPHENSON, JR.

Connell-Stephenson Wedding Solemnized

In a lovely wedding, marked by its simplicity, Miss Jane Connell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Presley Clyde Connell of Ruston, became the bride of Alvis Doyle Stephenson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson of Dallas, Texas.

The impressive double ring ceremony was performed by Father Donard Paulus in the presence of relatives and close friends of the bride and groom. The altar of the church was decorated with beautiful baskets of gladoli, stock, and ferns.

Preceding the ceremony Dr. M shall Bretz played trumpet Tune by Purcell, Two Versets from the Magnificat by Dupre, Panis Angelicus, by Franck, and Andante Theme from Concerto II by Rachmaninoff. Dr. Bretz also played the Processional and Recessional Wedding Marches.

The bride was radiantly lovely in her wedding gown of imported antique crystaline over taffeta. A yoke of embroidered Alencon lace framed the wide square neck line and the short crushed sleeves. The bouffant skirt sloped away from the waist with a graceful flare and swept out behind in a flowing Cathedral train. A tiara of seed pearls and veil of imported illusion cascading to her waist framed her dark hair. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis on a background of dark green leaves and white lace. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Caroline McCormick of Houston, Texas attended the bride as maid of honor. The matron of honor was an aunt of the bride, Mrs. Dell Barksdale Davis of Alexandria. Mrs. Marshall Terry of Dallas, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of butter-cup yellow silk organza over taffeta. The cowl neck lines were in graceful folds. At the waist was a yellow satin band with a bow in the back, and the bouffant skirts were waltz length. Their halos were of velvet leaves of soft yellow and light green shaded to light brown. They wore short white gloves and carried bouquets of gardenias with streamers of green and brown ribbon.

Mr. John Darrouzet, of Dallas, Texas, served the groom as best man. The groomsmen were Mr. W. L. Dean and Mr. Monte Guidry of Dallas.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Connell chose a gown of taupe lace and tucked satin made on princess lines. She wore a pink feathered hat and long white gloves. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses in shades of pink and rose.

Mrs. Stephenson, mother of the groom, wore a lovely pastel blue chantilly lace gown with a full scalloped skirt and short gloves. Her corsage was of gardenias.

The Reception

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Allen Barksdale on North Trenton Street. Mrs. Ardis Lewis and Mrs. Marshall Terry were co-hostesses.

Members of the bridal party, together with the parents of the bride and groom, formed a receiving line in the drawing room. A pink and green color motif was effected with asters, carnations, and gardenias.

The guests were invited into the dining room by Mrs. Alexander T. Hunt Jr., and Mrs. Walter Savage.

The bride's table, covered with a floor length white embroidered organdy cloth, over pink, was centered with a handsome bowl filled with stock, candytuft, and carnations in complementary shades of pink and rose. The focal point of interest was a beautifully embossed white Empire wedding cake, which was garlanded with rosebuds. Punch was served from a silver bowl, alternately by Mrs. Robert Upchurch and Mrs. C. E. Barham. Assisting in the serving courtesies were Mrs. Edwin Hodge, Mrs. Thomas Post, Mrs. David Lee Hayes, Mrs. William D. Brown Jr.

In the living room Mrs. Orum Burkhalter presided over the bride's book around which the bridesmaids had laid their bouquets. Others assisting in various courtesies included Mrs. Roy Cook Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Faulk, Mr. Marshal Terry, Mr. Ardis Lewis, Mr. C. E. Barham, Misses Dorothy Dell Barksdale, Mary Helen Barksdale, Ann Liddell Davis, and Elizabeth Davis.

Out of town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Stephenson Sr., Mr. John Darrouzet, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Guidry, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Stephenson, Ann Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Grib, Mrs. William Jackson, and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Terry, all of Dallas, Texas; Mr. Don Hilty of Houston, Texas; Mrs. Dell Barksdale Davis, Ann Liddell Davis, Elizabeth Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Post, Mrs. John Price, Miss Dorothy Petrie, Mrs. Estelle Petrie, Mrs. Rhodus Morrison, and Anna Clare Morrison, all of Alexandria; Mrs. Thomas Munholland, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Montgomery Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Miss Frances Guthrie, Mr. Jim Guthrie, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Brown Jr., Mrs. Henry Montgomery, and Mrs. Commie Newsom, all of Monroe; Mr. and Mrs. King Murphy of Arcadia; Mr. and Mrs. Clifton M. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Don Hathaway, and Mr. and Mrs. George Morgan, all of Shreveport; Mr. and Mrs. Logan Dainwood of Florida.

For the wedding trip to Florida and Naussau, the bride wore a becoming model of periwinkle blue linen ensemble with white accessories. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson will reside at 7317 Inwood Road, Dallas, Texas.

The bride is descended from one of the oldest families of Ruston. She is the great granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. Allen Barksdale. Judge Barksdale was the first judge of the Fifth District. Her maternal grandparents were Judge and Mrs. Samuel Laurens Barksdale. Her paternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. Presley Clyde Connell of Fordyce, Arkansas.

She was lovely in a ballerina length dress of white lace over taffeta, and her shoulder length veil fell from a band of satin sprinkled with seed pearls. She carried a single white orchid surrounded by swirls of white ribbon. She wore a single strand of pearls given her by the groom.

Miss Elizabeth Mount, the maid of honor, wore a pink crystalite dress, and on her head she wore a band of white daisies. Her bouquet was of pink daisies and greenery.

The bridesmaids were Miss Ann Mount, Helen Nelsen, Bernice Wallice and Rita Black. They wore lovely gowns of green crystalite and carried pink daisies. Carolyn Glover and Ronda Black were the flower girls, and they wore pink dresses and headbands of pink rose buds.

Bobby Bryan was best man and the groomsmen were Joel Venable and Richard Lee Soignier.

For her going away dress the bride wore a pink sheath with white accessories, and an orchid from her bouquet.

The out - of - town guests were Mrs. Rose O. Dent, the bride's grandmother; Mrs. E. B. Tullos and Sanda of Ferriday; Mrs. R. G. Price and children, Terry, Jerry, Richard and Robert of Sicily Island; Misses Ann Mount, Elizabth Mount and Helen Nelsen of Sicily Island.

MISS NAOMI SUE PETERS' engagement and approaching marriage to James Lynton Calhoun, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Calhoun of West Monroe, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Peters of De Quincy. The wedding will be solemnized August 9 at eight o'clock in the evening at the First Baptist Church of Georgetown.

MR. AND MRS. NATHAN L. EWING of Jonesboro announce the engagement of their daughter, Sarah Frances, to James Stuart Harrison, son of Mrs. W. L. Harrison and the late Dr. W. L. Harrison of Jonesboro. The wedding will be solemnized Sunday, August 24.

Horseradish and sour cream make a tangy sauce for canned green beans. Mix 1 teaspoon of the cream-style horseradish with ½ cup of sour cream. Serve on hot, seasoned beans.

Add extra flavor to an omelet by stirring a heaping tablespoon of sour cream into well-beaten eggs. Sour cream also gives finer texture and flavor to batter for cookies, pies and pastry.

THE HOME SHIFT

Science Makes Great Advance

By MILDRED SWIFT

Emerson once said, "America is but another name for opportunity." I know all of us will agree when we glimpse the wonders of the world to come. Already behind the doors of our research laboratories are being developed more marvelous things for tomorrow: Television screens that hang on the wall, windows that close when it rains, cars that steer themselves! Yes, the world of tomorrow will be an even better place to live.

In The Garden, Too

Who would have thought we'd have non - burn fertilizers; lawns that need mowing only about twice a year; dwarf youpon and abelia and weed killers? Yes, people have been at work and are still working to make gardening easier and more beautiful. New shrubs and trees are being introduced all the time.

Still, there are interesting and monotonous jobs to be done all the time. Those bearded iris that are so beautiful in the spring will be casting off dead foliage. Keep this removed. Work some bonemeal around the plants being sure you don't disturb the feeder roots or rhizomes. I know you're saying, "Can't I just put the bonemeal around without working it in? The weather is too warm to dig." I'll be honest. That's what I do, but it is necessary to use more of the bonemeal because some washes away. I'm sure the plants don't get as much of the food as they should, either.

Bonemeal makes the soil alkaline, which is what the bearded iris wants. This fertilizer provides food for bloom. It decays slowly. This bonemeal should be used around your other bulbs, too. Also, around rain lilies and Easter lilies. If you're transplanting the latter, work the bonemeal in the soil before planting the bulbs.

Back to bearded iris. There are two schools of thought on trimming these back in fan shape at this time of year, or in August. A few years back we recommended you to do just that. Now, that point is questioned. It's less work to leave them as is, so let's do it.

Also, we're told now we can use a light mulch around these bearded iris. Pine straw is best as it doesn't pack. Be careful — the rhizome rots if it gets buried under a heavy mulch.

Natives, Too

You can divide and transplant your native iris, now. They're going dormant. They too, should be planted shallow, but a little deeper than the bearded varieties. This iris is not particular about drainage. It will bloom standing in water or in a well drained bed. The colors are deeper and blooms are more profuse when there's plenty of water. This native Louisisna iris likes an acid soil. Use plenty of decayed vegetable matter.

More Work!

If your hybrid tea roses have weak or dead branches, prune them out. They contribute nothing to the plant and their removal may induce new, stout canes to put out.

Raise The Lawn Mower

Riding around town, I see lots of St. Augustine lawns cut too close. Many mowers are cutting into the roots. Also, grass cut too low allows the sun to bake the roots. Unless the clippings are too heavy so as to smother the grass, leave them. They decay and give humus.

You'll notice St. Augustine under trees is not doing too well. You may decide the chinch bug is eating it, but most likely it's a fungus caused by too much rain and shade. The ground stays wet too long. I used tersan last year and found it very effective. Just sprinkled it on the sick grass.

After mowing there's hand trimming to do around trees, walks and drives. This grooming gives your garden "umph."

Keep weeds out of beds. Mulching helps control these, but with small annuals, it's next to impossible to cover the ground. If you cultivate any small flowers or large plants or trees, cultivate very shallow, from a half inch to an inch. Most plants have shallow roots. If the weeds got ahead of you while you were vacationing, cut them off close to the ground, if they're close to a small plant. Otherwise, you'll disturb the root growth of your cherished plant.

Keep blooms picked and dead plantings carried off. Put all this on the compost heap if it's insect free. Keep the compost turned once a month if there's anybody around with that much muscle.

Ground Covers

Recently I visited a very beautiful professionally landscaped garden and picked up several ideas to bring to you. One bed was covered with Confederate Jasmine. I asked the owner how they achieved that result and he said, "Just leave it alone except to keep some of the long tendrils clipped. If it starts climbing up a shrub or tree, cut it back." You can imagine the beauty of that bed with the dark green shiny leaves of the jasmine covering every inch of ground.

In this garden, gravel was used extensively as a ground cover. Discussing this with the landscape architect, I remarked that it seemed that the gravel would pack the ground too much and smother the plants. He said only hardy plants such as yucca, nandina, pyracantha and some palms would live in the gravel, but they seemed to thrive there.

In all cases where gravel was used as a ground cover, there was an edging to keep the gravel in bounds. You know how disastrous any kind of stone can be to your lawn mower. The effect of plants growing in the gravel was very lovely and different. Easy upkeep and that's what we all want.

A Few Ideas

So many homemakers have called about white materials turning yellow after being washed with a chlorine rinse. Most of the materials now have been treated for wrinkle resistance. If you'll notice on the label, often you'll find the instructions tell you not to use a chlorine bleach. You can use sodium perborate, two or three tablespoons in the rinse water. After the garment or object has turned yellow, there's little you can do but dye it another color.

Plant Names Puzzling To All Amateurs

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In the gardening fraternity, the type most likely to annoy is the amateur who insists on being the botanical — or Latin — name for plants. For some reason or other, the privilege of calling those Lady Washington geraniums in the window box Pelargonium domesticus is reserved for nurserymen and ladies who lecture on flower arrangements. Anyone else is suspected of being a plant name dropper.

I love most of the common names for plants — love-in-a-mist, patience, forget-me-not, honesty— but I think that the use of the botanical names is a very good idea, particularly for beginner gardeners. It helps to eliminate confusion.

Recently, a friend of mine confided that she yearned to have a bridal wreath close to her house. Nonsense, I said briskly, she already had two bridal wreaths, both well-established. It turned out that while I think of spirea vanhouttei as bridal wreath, she had spirea thunbergi in mind.

The easiest way to learn plant names is to pick them up when you are working with the plants and studying their cultivation. Then, if you fear the jeers of non-gardeners, learn also the popular names.

While this is the season of flowers, it is also the season of pests. In our neighborhood, the slugs are on the wane, both as a result of drier weather and of poison bait. The cleaner the garden beds, the fewer the slugs. And they love to linger in dense, moist growth, so one of the tricks in control is to allow light and sunshine in around the plants.

For most of the rest, sprays and dusts on a 10-day schedule of application give adequate results. (July, when so many of the flowers are coming in, is also a fine time to give plants a tonic—a booster shot of fast-acting fertilizer which will reach them quickly.)

Through the years, most of us have learned pretty well how to handle most of the unwelcome visitors to our gardens and lawns: rabbits, moles, beetles, aphids, borers. Two which defeat me utterly are dogs and children.

This spring my perennial border was effectively smashed by a two-week craze for cops-and-robbers during which the area behind my privet hedge — the border—was the hide-out for the black hats. The main attraction was an old and extremely climbable willow tree nearby, used as a lookout point. Last year the little ones invented a game of throwing themselves into the hedge and bouncing out — an activity from which the hedge is still recuperating.

Dogs, alas, are even more difficult than these young devotees of the Old West. A new arrival—a friendly, lovable St. Bernard puppy named Heidi—cuts directly across the annual beds in eagerness to greet us, and thoroughly dug up my cold frame just when all the seedlings were ready for transplanting. You can't spray the entire place with dog repellents. You can't insist that your neighbor leash the dog and chain up the children. It's a problem and one for which, I guess, there really is no answer.

During this period, keep the earlier annuals and perennials blooming longer by cutting off dying flower heads. And for better fall bloom of chrysanthemums, keep them from growing leggy by pinching off the leader shoots. This will make the plants bushy. Then later, as buds appear, pinch many of them off if you want fewer but more dramatic blooms.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Designs By Mrs. Colvin

By MARY M. JARDINE

Modern and Oriental designs were featured in the one - man show by Mrs. P. A. Colvin of Monroe at the Garden Center this week. Mrs. Colvin is a nationally accredited flower show judge and is currently serving as president of the Welcome Garden Club.

The designs were planned for Audie's new home which is modern in design with an Oriental theme throughout. The first composition was in the traditional formal Japanese style with the stylized three placements of Heaven, Man and Earth, with the classical usabata for a container. The placements were of umbrella plant (cyperus alternifolius). The container was set on a black base and an Oriental figurine was used as an accessory. This was planned for an Oriental hall table fifteen (15) inches in height. The Japanese traditional formal design used originally in the temples from the seventh to the fourteenth centuries is easily recognized by the three triangular placements constructed in the following manner: Upright central placement, the height from one and one-half to five times the height of container. Intermediate placement, leaning away from the upright at an angle of about 30 degrees. Inverted triangle placement which leans away from the central placement on the opposite side of the intermediate placement at an angle of 45 degrees.

In the early history of floral art in Japan it was closely connected with Buddhism, and like that religion was practiced for centuries only by priests and court nobles. By the 14th century it had permeated the masses of the people, so that today even the humblest of households takes pride in its flower arrangements in the Tokonoma. (Built in alcove in Japanese homes especially for flower arrangement.) In the formal design the plant stems are placed close together as though growing from one source. The stems usually are at least four inches in height above the water level before branching out.

Another interesting Japanese line arrangement was planned for the den, where burnt orange is part of the color decor. The container was a dark green bottle, narrow at the top and flaring at the base. The Heaven, Man and Earth line placements were created with pedilanthus. Three tiger lilies enhanced the line pattern.

An ultra modern vertical design was planned for a special niche in the hall between the living room and den. A tall slender bottle of dark green was selected for the container in which were placed three peacock feathers with their rich, iridescent colors of green, blue and gold. A bunch of frosty white grapes, and another of blue-purple were placed vertically down the side of the container. Glossy magnolia leaves were added for transition and interest.

For the living room bookcase wall Audie planned a modern design featuring a modern madonna. The figurine is twenty - two inches high, creamy white in color and of graceful lines. The Hogarth line of beauty, (lazy S curve) is immediately called to mind and the design was constructed following the lines of the figure. A large black base was used both to emphasize the design and give good balance. Tall spikes of yucca were placed in a swirled pattern behind the madonna. Buds and half open blossoms of magnolia were placed high on the left side of the figure with additional buds and a fully opened bloom placed at the base of the design. A very compelling design with a deep spiritual quality.

The beautiful Ellen Bosanquet crinum lilies displayed by Mrs. Diehlmann Bernhardt were greatly admired. This is a most unique color among the crinums, being of a deep wine - rose color. These large and showy lily - like plants definitely have a place in our southern gardens. They added charm and beauty to "grandmother's garden." Now flower lovers are again learning to appreciate these beautiful plants of easy culture. Colors range from white to pink to wine red with some whites with deep pink or red midstripes, the latter is called milk and wine lily.

Water Helps Your Garden

By AUDREY DAWSON

Feature water in your garden — you may try a water basin for birds, small or large fountains. The moving water from the sprinkler on your hose gives a sparkling note of coolness to the landscape: It attracts birds and helps keep the lawn green. Remember let water soak for several hours for deep root penetration.

Cool colors are blues to blue-greens grey - greens and greens. Here are a few plants that would give cooling effects — dusty miller vitex, pineapple guave and Texas sage are all grey-green. If you have an area that you do not want to mow, use variegated plants as groundcovers such as ivy, periwinkle aspidistra or liriope. Other good groundcovers are monkey grass violets, English ivy and strawberry begonia.

Out Of Town

Yours truly will be in our Capitol City most of this week — and a most pleasant week is anticipated as I have been asked to serve as one of the judges in the State 4-H Clothing contest. Don't you know it will be loads of fun watching outstanding teenagers from the 64 parishes of the state modeling beautiful dresses which they made. Girls from Ouachita who will model are Joyce Saxon, school dress; Lorena White, camp costume; and Patsy Banks, dress-up costumes. These garments have been made under the supervision of our associate home agent, Betty Jane Hodgkins.

Council Members

Please, Council Members don't forget the meeting Friday, July 18, at 10:00 at the Agriculture Building in West Monroe. This is a most important meeting as we will make plans for Farm & Home Week and the parish fair. We changed the date for this month because your agent will enter L. S. U., July 21.

Canning and Freezing

Mrs. Homemaker, if you want the latest information on conserving foods for your family call our office, phone FA 3-2251, and get your copy of the bulletins, "Home Freezing of Foods" and "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" prepared by our specialist Miss Estelle Fournet.

Hints For Homemakers

Sashes and apron strings will survive in a washing machine if you tie them together so they will not tangle with other garments.

An easy way to clean clothespins is to tie them in a sack and wash them in a good suds in the machine for a few minutes.

Sprinkled clothes will dampen evenly if they are folded rather than rolled and wrapped in a plastic bag.

By adding a small amount of starch to the last rinse when washing worn table linens they will resume their original crispness and firmness of weave.

If you hang freshly laundered dresses by the hem they will be much easier to iron.

Benson Quotes

The following was taken from the speech given by Secretary of Agriculture Benson to the club members attending the National 4-H Conference in Washington recently which I thought was good not only for 4-H'ers but all o.f us, and I quote, "As we move forward I hope we'll keep in mind what I consider the most basic thing of all in 4-H Club work — the building of character. If a man or woman doesn't have real character he can't possibly have much else of value. Character is not reputation. Reputation is what people think you are — Character is what you really are. Character is the one thing which we make in this world and take with us into the next."

A Thought

Envy is always a confession of inferiority no matter who is the object of it.

Save all those washing instruction tags that come with the garments you buy and post them on a bulletin board near your washing machine. Or staple the string to an index card and file them in a recipe box.

Trees Sometimes Hurt Themselves

Trees sometimes hurt themselves as if they didn't have enough trouble from insects, disease, storms man-made woes like restricted growing space, autos and lawnmowers, among many others.

Tree lovers generally are more aware of the outside agencies of destruction than those by which woody friends get involved on their own. As a result, they may not come to the rescue of landscape pets when they need help the most, says E. I. Kabel, field representative of the Davey Tree Expert Co.

Not uncommon is the tree that tries suicide. This is the one that will strangle itself to death with a girdling root that cuts off the sap flow. Surgery that severs the offending root can restore growing vigor.

Malformations also are common in the branch structure. Interfering branches are an example. These will wear each other out from constant friction. Such weakened branches may come tumbling during a big storm. And the bark injury that results often invites invasion by insects, disease and decay. The best care in branch malformation is preventive: seeing that trees are properly pruned when young.

Other plant life may make the tree's existence precarious. Vigorous growing vines, among them wild grape and Virginia creeper, may strangle it in the competition for soil nutrients.

To get an omelet fluffy, add a pinch of powdered sugar and a pinch of cornstarch.

'Yellow Flag' First Sign Of Tree Killer

Amateur sleuths should conduct a dragnet over the next two months to round up tree suspects that may soon be guilty of arboreal homicide unless checked.

These suspects will show an obvious clue to the sharp eyed — a "yellow flag."

This, in effect, is the advice of Martin L. Davey Jr. who heads the Davey tree experts in sounding a warning against spread of dread Dutch elm disease.

The so - called yellow flag that denotes the potential tree murderer is the first outward sign of the elm infection and is easily spotted during July and August. This is the bright yellow foliage on one or more branches, usually high up in the tree's crown.

While yellowing leaves may signal any number of ills, including those from drought or even hunger, no time should be lost in calling for the help of the professional tree man or city forester. He will cut off the affected limb and look for tell - tale brown streaks in the diseased sapwood. If need be cuttings can be sent to qualified laboratories for verification.

Once the diagnosis is certain no time should be lost in putting the saw to the afflicted elm to control spread of Dutch elm. There is no cause for concern however, if leaves seem to be fading on small twigs in heavily shaded parts of trees. This is a natural phenomenon common to elms in dry, hot weather.

Dirt Affords Relief From Many Stresses

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y. — Gardening is one of the hobbies — along with painting, ceramics and handcrafts — important in the treatment of mental problems. It is, so I read recently in an article by one of the nation's top psychiatrists, a part of the therapy program in the nation's best mental hospitals.

Dr. William Menninger said gardening is often able to catch the interest of a patient who for too long has been concerned only with thinking about himself. Certainly it is true that the average hobby gardener, even the one who thinks Miltown is a Connecticut suburb, is likely to be more concerned with his plants than with himself. Many a time one of us has worked happily in a drizzle transplanting seedlings under the best of all possible plant conditions and the worst of all human conditions.

And I must say that it is hard to take time out worrying about a backache, induced by too much raking when the dogwood is showing signs of wilting and you can't find any evidence of a borer or any other symptom of trouble, sleeping. We usually drop into bed after a day behind a hoe and go swiftly into unconsciousness.

Fortunately, demands of the garden drop off rather sharply during these hot weather months. The hectic pace of spring and fall would be too much for the gardener to follow when the sun is high and hot.

This is a time when grass growth slows down and the time between mowings lengthens a bit. Most of the basic planting work is done and it is time now to start thinking about any necessary fall improvement work — needed trees or shrubs. It is, however, a fine time to start seed for perennials and biennials so that seedlings can be moved into permanent position by fall, ready for bloom next year. Best location for such seed beds is one which provides the young seedlings with some shade against the summer sun. In the event such a place is hard to find, next best solution is to arrange some sort of portable screen for a partial shield.

The bidding:

South, 1 spade; West, pass; North, 2 spades; East, Pass.

South, 4 spades; West, pass; North, Pass; East, pass.

Opening lead, Club king.

South in today's hand was faced with a combination of cards that, for some reason not readily apparent, is likely to induce a lazy attitude in most declarers. Reference is made to the management of the diamond suit.

A word or two may be in order as to the bidding sequence. As events took their turn, it was fortunate for West that he took no action over the opening bid, for declarer might have been made aware of the proper way to play the hand.

But as a matter of policy, I cannot approve of his inaction. West is fully prepared for any suit partner might be obliged to name, and a game could easily be missed by his failure to make a take-out double.

West led his high clubs, declarer ruffed the third round, drew trumps in one round, cashed the ace and king of hearts and set about holding his diamond losers to one trick.

Since West had already shown the ace and king of clubs he thought it a good chance that East held the king of diamonds. He consequently played the ace of diamonds and followed with a low one toward the queen, losing two tricks in the suit and the contract.

The play of the ace of diamonds first was improper. Declarer thus gave himself only a 50-50 chance to make the hand depending upon the location of the king. If East had the king there was no need to play the ace first.

A low diamond should be led away from the ace. If the queen declarer still retains the chance that West also has the jack of diamonds and then ten may be finessed next time. This play affords declarer a 75 per cent chance of success. In 50 per cent of the cases East will hold the king. In the other 50 cases in which West holds that card, half the time, or 25 per cent of the cases, West will hold the jack also.

Girl Scout News

Midway the first session of Girl Scout day camp, we're repeating some of the comments we've heard from old and new campers. One who had been to Pine Wood before without encountering a rainy day, said, "I'm so glad it rained this year; we've had so much fun." Another comment is from a mother whose child is registered for the second session. After two days of seeing her daughter burst into tears when she heard her playmates tell of fun at camp, the mother sent her away for a week in order to make the waiting more bearable. Full attendance showed that rain in no way dampened spirits of campers.

Want to know what to do with 165 girls ages 8-13 on a rainy day? Ask the following adults who have volunteered their leadership in order to make camping possible for girls: Mrs. C. C. Walters, leader of the Shady Pines unit of Brownie Scouts, Mrs. Dozier of Hickory Hill Brownies, Mrs. Irwin Kilpatrick and Mrs. Harry Stone, Hummingbird Hill unit, Mrs. Woodrow Hathorn and Mrs. C. E. Hays, outdoor campers unit, all Brownies. Intermediate leaders are: Mrs. D. T. DeMasterson, Whispering Pines Unit, Mrs. W.A. Roche and Mrs. John H. Brown, Jr., Pine Cliff, Mrs. Earl Fisher, Shady Slope, Mrs. Leon Noland, Jr., Blackberry Bramble unit, and Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, Century Oak. Mrs. L. L. Nash is in charge of supplies and equipment and Miss Annis Klie is camp director.

Program aides ably assisting in the units are: Linda Bird, Mary Jo Strausser, Joan Williams, Mary Martin, Patricia Graham, Nancy Martin, Billie Sue Dixon, Teddie Dixon, Jean Slaughter, Gretchen Guelzow, Sue Gregory, Julia Faye Anthony, Tish Poe, Diana Jordan, Dorothy Fortenberry, Cora Theriot, Carolyn Herr, Ronnie Hervey, Ann Pankey, Nancy Noland, Pamela Waicunas. Anne McCarty, whose family moved away last winter is back at camp while visiting in Monroe.

On Wednesday, the two units of younger Intermediates, who have chosen the tree badge for their ten day program, spent the day at the Linville fire tower, with Mr. Thompson, of the Forestry Department to help them. After the trip they started making prints of the leaves of trees they have learned, and saw movies about forest conservation. In line with the camp theme of the outdoor good turn, sharp-eyed Brownies have been looking for pine seedlings that are peeping up everywhere. The girls drive stakes to mark the trees and put pine needles for a mulch. In the fall they will transplant the ones not needed where they come up. Again, in keeping with the camp theme, each day for four days one of the buses will stop for an hour on the way home for the girls to visit the Wildlife and Fisheries Commission, where Mr. Davis will help the Intermediate Scouts with some of the requirements for the conservation badge.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

Heaven For Arranger's

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The summer garden is a veritable heaven for flower arrangers. Just now, the montbretias are beginning to flower — yellows and browns and hennas on wiry stems that carry their own lines in a very definite way. The early veronicas just last long enough to be used with the first montbretias. The veronica called Blue Spires is one of these. Just now, that backbone of deep blue in the July and August garden, Veronica longifolia subsessilis is beginning to flower. These long bright spikes of deep blue. (Most of our summer flowers which we think of as blue are really violet) last long and well as cut flowers. They will bloom right out to the end of the spike in water and can be used with several sets of other flowers before you have to throw them away.

Nicotiana comes in some very unusual shades of red — even to cherry red, and these are very striking when combined with white petunias. The ordinary nicoitana has a tendency to close up in daylight, but there is a new variety that stays open on the brightest day.

No summer garden can very well do without Salvia farinacea. The variety Blue Bedder is excellent, but even the ordinary kind is good in arrangements because of the floured over or powdered effect that the stems have as well as the flowers. In the garden, this grey blue is a great softener of the harsh summer sunlight.

For large compositions, the crinums, those gorgeous lily-shaped giants of the amaryllis family, are a knock-out. Daylilies are still blooming if you have some late varieties, but be sure to use the kinds that stay open at night. All of these huge flowers can be relieved by some of the big white cape hyacinth that grows shoulder high and is coming into bloom righ. now. The new hardy agapanthuses from South Africa grow shoulder high and lower. They bloom on long stiff wands that rise from what looks like large daffodil foliage. The innumerable little blue flowers are about half an inch across and are clustered in large loose balls of flowers at the ends of the tall stems.

The single, light yellow flowers of the Mermaid rose are delightful in summer arrangements. This rose, a "climber," is a product of our old Mcartney rose, that single white rose that blooms all summer in a thicket of briars. Mermaid has the beautiful fine foliage of this parent. The flowers are larger than those of Macartney, however, and the plant is extremely lusty and healthy and has some flowers all summer after the main blooming season.

If you do not have some of the flowers mentioned in this column for summer cutting, you can enrich your decorating material by planting them this fall.

Four Portraits In Neutrality

Tito: Communnist Equality

EDITOR'S NOTE: THE WIDE Cold War gulf between East and West is occupied chiefly by four men whose very names have become synonymous with the nations they lead. Each has steered a tricky, sometimes zigzag course between the two gulf shores, taking aid and abuse from both sides in the name of neutrality and nationalism. Here's an up - to - the-minute appraisal by veteran Associated Press correspondents of Tito of Yugoslavia, Nasser of Egypt Nehur of India and Sukarno of Indonesia.

By BORIS BOSKOVIC

BELGRADE (AP) — President Tito recently celebrated his 66th birthday amid growing signs that his balancing act between East and West has once again put him in hot water with the Kremlin.

Just as he did 10 years ago Tito appears on the world stage as a defender of his country's independence against Kremlin domination, a role imposed upon him by Moscow.

His present struggle is in line with his character and past record.

After World War II, old Communist Tito wanted badly to cooperate with the Soviet Union. For a while Yugoslavia appeared to be a Soviet satellite. Then disappointment set in.

Tito's ideas on communism were based on cooperation among equal and independent Communist nations. Stalin wanted subordination and he got it from others who had the Red Army to thank for their jobs.

Had Own Army

Tito was different. He had fought with his partisans. He had an organized army, police and political apparatus of his own which liberated the country. He was a leader in his own right.

This was the secret which made it possible for Tito to stand successfully against Stalin. This was why Soviet challenge could not remove him.

After being expelled from the Communist world Tito got Western aid and that aid without political strings, helped him survive the Soviet economic blockade which brought Yugoslavia to the edge of bankruptcy.

TITO

But Tito remained a Communist and has never denied it.

After Stalin died, the new Soviet boss, Nikita Khrushchev, came to Tito to apologize for the break. It was a triumph for the Yugoslav leader that the world's strongest Communist country should come to him for reconciliation.

The new Kremlin leaders admitted Stalin's blunders and asked for Tito's friendship. They asked Tito's support in crushing the Stalinists. Tito agreed.

He thought that by helping Khrushchev, the last remnants of Stalinism would be eliminated. He believed that the new Soviet boss might bring peace and cooperation to the Communist family.

But he never believed 100 per cent in Khrushchev. Cautiously he kept his Western ties and in the ensuing years, he succeeded in remaining on good terms with both East and West.

More Stalinism

As soon as Khrushchev was safely in full power, he launched the present anti-Tito campaign — a small cold war every bit as frigid as Stalin's.

The fact that the Kremlin has decided to snub him will not drive Tito into the Western camp.

His position between East and West is much different than those of two other notable fence-straddlers, Nasser and Nehru. Tito is a Communist. They are not.

While the Kremlin would tolerate Western ties by Nasser and Nehru, it could not permit Tito to seek the same alliances.

The fact that Tito could permit himself the hazardous luxury of coming to grips with the Soviet indicates that he feels secure in his job. It appears he has reason.

In a country where independence is a magic word, he has the almost undivided support of his people — Communists and non-Communists — when he is defending the prime issue:

Independence.

Nehru: Negative 3rd Position

By WATSON SIMS

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru recently was asked by a newsman to explain his "third position" between East and West in the Cold War.

His reply may have been as close as he has ever come to answering a question which has vexed Washington, London and Moscow.

"The 'third position' is a negative one," he said. "It represents abstaining from a positive movement."

Over the years, Nehru has irritated both sides by remaining in the middle and accentuating the negative.

The Prime Minister has, Indians quickly point out, many positive policies. He is first and foremost for India and anything that will help his impoverished and underdeveloped country. He is for peace, believing that no nation, including India, could avoid the consequences of war.

But it is largely through the negative that Nehru has gained his international reputation. In a period of history when East and West are verbally, if not militarily, at each other's throats, Nehru has emerged as the leading "no" man of his time.

He is against military pacts. He is against foreign bases. He is against hydrogen bomb tests. He is against repression of lesser Communist states, either by military or ideological methods. He is against the Cold War and all its manifestations and criticizes both sides for waging it.

At one time or another, this has earned Nehru the anger of both East and West.

By and large, however, Nehru has managed to dodge the brickbats from both sides; to press ahead for India and add to his own stature by standing in the middle. To the envy and anger of some states which have taken sides, India continues to draw economic aid from both.

The reasons go far deeper than the techniques and attitudes of any one person.

The sprawling subcontinent of India, with its population of 400 million, is perhaps the biggest single target in the ideological war.

Although Russia and the West recognize that under Nehru India will join neither camp, each is willing to stake large bets on the way it will go in the future.

Thus America has poured more than a billion dollars into Indian aid since independence. Russia is building a 125 million dollar steel plant for India's second five year plan and has authorized a similar amount for purchasing industrial equipment.

Against this background, there has been controversy as to where Nehru's sympathies really lie.

Even Nehru's Indian admirers concede that at the international level he appears quicker to criticize the West than Russia. An explanation heard here is that the British - educated Premier expects the best of the West and only hopes for the best from Russia — and uses his criticism accordingly.

But if the policies he applies at home can be a criterion, the Prime Minister would have to be classified as anti-Communist.

In a recent private speech to his Congress party, Nehru said he wants India to have a kind of socialism in which every individual has equal opportunity.

"I do not at all prefer state controlling everything because I attach a value to individual freedom," he said. "I do not want state socialism of that extreme kind in which the state is all powerful."

If Nehru can establish such a system in India, the West will consider its aid dollars well spent. But there is wide belief that it must be accomplished within the 68-year-old Prime Minister's lifetime. Many doubt that anyone else will be able to steer his middle course through the strong currents of the Cold War.

Sukarno: 'Guided Freedom'

By JOHN RODERICK

JAKARTA (AP) — Rebellious army officers trained their cannon on Merdeka Palace where President Sukarno, a lonely figure, sat quietly awaiting the next tense move.

"Meet our demands or we will blast you out," the officers told him in effect.

Sukarno's reply was a request for a conference. The talk lasted two hours. When the rebels left the palace, tears were streaming down their cheeks.

Sukarno not only had won but he had convinced the rebels their actions had endangered the young nation.

That was in 1952. Today Sukarno is handling a new revolt. Testimony of his powers of persuasion is the fact that his righthand man is Abdul Haris Nasution, one of the leaders of the 52 uprising.

What kind of man is Sukarno? How has he been able to stay on top throughout crisis after crisis? Is he a dictator? Is he a Communist?

No Conclusive Answers

These are questions which both friend and foe have asked for many months, without being able to reach a conclusive answer.

One thing is certain. He is not a Communist. But he has compromised with the Communist party in his own country, because, he says, he does not believe it would place communism above country. For this, he has been called over-trusting and naive.

And, though he has vast powers, he is not a dictator and apparently has no intention of becoming one. He has demonstrated this in the past by refusing absolute authority at a time when the nation would have welcomed it.

At 57, Sukarno has risen through a lifetime of revolution to become head of the richest nation in Southeast Asia, one whose population of 83 million makes it the sixth most populous on earth.

No ascetic, like Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam, or China's Mao Tze-Tung, he most closely resembles Nehru among Asia's top men.

Like Nehru, he lives passionately for the masses without wholly being part of them. Like him, he firmly believes his country can survive only if it keeps aloof from the quarrels besetting East and West.

For defending this policy, he has been all but abandoned by the United States, ardently wooed by Soviet Russia and Red China and looked upon with distrust by his anti-Communist Asian neighbors.

Sukarno has come under the bitterest attack in the West and among many of his own countrymen for his principle of guided democracy. He advanced it, he said, after becoming disillusioned with the political parties which in the years of independence had failed to confront their duties, waxed fat and rich on corruption and graft.

Reds Not In Yet

His original idea was to abolish the parties, but this ran into such a storm of opposition he abandoned it. Then, he proposed guided democracy which would provide for a cabinet formed proportionately from all parties.

Criticism of the guided democracy plan has centered around the fact that it would permit Communists to enter the cabinet. So far, however, since the original plan had to be modified, they have not done so.

Throughout the present political turmoil, the picture emerges of Sukarno as a very human individual, with normal weaknesses and vanities, but nonetheless deeply concerned with the future of the young republic he helped to create.

Still the people's idol, he seems destined to continue playing an important role in this island nation for years to come.

Nasser: Leaning Eastward

By WILTON WYNN

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser sometimes is called a "Tito in reverse."

Tito shifted from the Soviet bloc to the neutralist camp. Nasser arrived among the neutrals from the Western side.

When Nasser seized power from King Farouk in 1952, he considered himself pro-Western, and so did the West. The embassies of greatest influence in his country were the American and the British. He was regarded as a bulwark against extremist and leftist elements.

Favors East

Six years later, Nasser says he is following a policy of "positive neutrality." Yet there is little doubt that his relations with the Communist bloc are far better than those with the West.

He is receiving enormous military and economic help from the Soviet bloc. And his propaganda machine rarely has an unkind word for the Communist world, while it turns out a daily grist of invective against the West.

Nasser insists, however, that his policy is one of non-alignment. The imbalance in propaganda attacks on the West he would explain this way:

"Being neutral does not mean that we treat both sides exactly alike. It means that we are free to criticize those who attack us and praise those who befriend us.

"The Soviet Union has been our friend in critical moments, and so we say good things about them. When they become hostile to us, we will criticize them."

Nasser has tried to play one power off against another, and thus maintain a semblance of genuine neutralism in his policy. When he shocked the West by buying arms from the Soviets in 1955, he turned to the West for financing of his high dam, and so on.

Even more important is Nasser's "Samsonian" complex. He is ready to pull down the pillars on himself as well as his enemies if he is pressed too hard. If he gets sufficiently annoyed at the West, he is capable of spitefully going straight into the Communist camp. Western leaders pretend they don't believe he really would do it, but they are not sure enough to risk it.

Nasser seized power in a military coup and has retained his position by controlling the machinery of power in the country—the police, army, and propaganda organs. He has never been intensely popular in Egypt, but his foreign policy seems to be supported by a majority of Egyptians.

Some argue that Nasser exercises a brake on Egypt's swing to the left. The Soviet Union has gained such wide popularity by supporting the Arabs internationally that a more liberal government might be forced by popular pressure to move farther to the left than Nasser. There is almost no possibility that a change of government would make Egypt more pro-Western.

BOMBER ATTACKS SHIP

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI)—Indonesian air force said Friday a single B26 bomber believed based outside Indonesian territory attacked a central government ship in North Celebes waters Wednesday. It said the raid caused no casualties, but the announcement did not mention possible damage to the ship.

AMBASSADORS AGREE

U.S. In Trouble In L. America

By PAT HERMAN

LONDON (UPI)—Latin American ambassadors in London, their reaction sharpened rather than blunted by distance, are agreed that the United States is in trouble south of the border.

The diplomats say that U.S. officials had better attempt to find out the reasons for resentment against the United States if Latin America is to remain an ally in the East-West struggle for power.

Although these diplomats talk of growing "resentment" instead of "anti-Americanism," they have admitted that this resentment, so effectively dramatized by the riots against Vice President Richard M. Nixon during his recent Latin American tour, played directly into Communist hands.

The diplomats stressed that their frank appraisal was motivated by their sincere friendship, and that their preoccupation was based on concern about the future of the Americas as well as their own national interests.

"Latin America is the only place in the world where the United States has a policy that is going to foster Communism," said Peruvian Ambassador Ricardo Rivera Schreiber, formerely his country foreign minister and a diplomat of long experience.

"Russia is pushing harder in Latin American than ever before and she will have success if the United States does not reappraise her policy."

Pulls No Punches

Outspoken Brazilian Ambassador Assis Chateaubriand pulled no punches.

"During the past 12 years the U.S. State Department has had two policies: The Marshal Plan devoted to Europe and the John Foster Dulles plan devoted to Asia and the Middle East," he said.

"In the past 10 years the United States gave the world 60 billion dollars but Latin America received less than two billion. Now the United States needs a third policy: a comprehensive scheme to judge Latin America's needs as basis for mutual understanding."

Chateaubriand, who is a newspaper proprietor - journalist and politician as well as ambassador said that economically the United States acted as "a mother to Africa, Asia and Europe" but "only as a step-mother to Latin America."

Venezuelan Ambassador Manuel Dagnino noted with concern the Venezuelan feeling of "resentment" that prompted the anti-Nixon demonstrations. He said that economic crisis and a feeling of "neglect" were the two most basic factors contributing to resentment that was building up against the United States in Latin America.

"What is needed is a comprehensive plan to help form an American bloc—against the Russians if possible. This is necessary on the chess-board of world power politics" he said.

U. S. Tariffs Could Ruin

Peruvian ambassador Rivera Schreiber noted that "U.S. tariffs could be the ruin of these industries that were built up during the war together with the ruin of our fishing industry."

Costa Rican Ambassador Alfredo Alfaro Sotela said that only by helping Latin American countries sell coffee at a price "to meet African competition" would their economic strain be eased and their relations with the United States bettered.

"We feel that the United States is humanitarian but we must be convinced," said the ambassador. "Help us financially with bigger loans and easing of credit. But then be sure to publicize it so that we know what you are losing in Latin America."

Ecuadorian Charge d'Affaires Juan Chiriboga underscored the importance of understanding Latin American psychology.

"The people in our towns naturally resent the rich American brother," he said. "I admit that in certain countries their nationalism in the economic field has gone too far.

"But it always has been difficult for them to understand why the U.S. does not differentiate in her treatment of Latin American dictatorships and democracies.

"Although legally the United states has no right to interfere with the internal politics of our countries, we feel that she could be less generous with economic aid to undemocratic regimes," he said.

The most outspoken critic of this attitude was Argentine Ambassador Alberto M. Candioti.

"We do not understand those nations which, after sacrificing so many lives in wars to defend democracy and freedom now protect the dictators who still wield their power in various parts of the world" he said.

BARBARIC YAWPER

Beat Generation Is 'Beating Him'

(Editor's Note) Jack Kerouac, 36-year-old author who coined the term "beat generation" to describe a wild, jazz-loving segment of American youth, has been hailed by some literary critics as among the most significant new U.S. novelists since Ernest Hemingway and dismissed by others as a "barbaric yawper." His descriptions of the frantic life of young "hipsters" in his novel, "On the Road," made him one of the most talked-about writers of the past year and gave a name to "beat generation" cults from New York to San Francisco. In the following interview with United Press International, Kerouac comments on charges that he glorifies hoodlumism in his books.)

NEW YORK (UPI) — "This 'beat generation' stuff is beginning to beat me," novelist Jack Kerouac said Saturday.

Kerouac, whose choice of subject matter in his much - publicized books has led some critics to picture him as a short of apostle of drug addiction, promiscuous sex and auto theft, denied suggestions that his writing encourages juvenile immorality or defiance of law and order.

"Youthful criminals of today may be using the 'beat generation' tag as an excuse for their actions, but the terms as I meant it has nothing to do with crime," Kerouac told United Press International.

"What I meant when I thought of the phrase was this: When you're young and you're a deadbeat, you drift from job to job and bum around, you believe in art and friendship but no one believes in you because you haven't got a cent to show for it," Kerouac said.

"Comes a day when you suddenly raise your eyes to heaven in despair and you feel a wave of beautitude flowing through you, especially in church. This feeling is as old as time."

A Frenetic Trek

Kerouac's recent best - seller, "On the Road," is a powerfully-written novel describing the deeds and misdeeds of a group of 20-year-olds during a frenetic trek back and forth across the United States in stolen and borrowed automobiles.

"It's a humorous, sentimentally-flavored type shot of life as it's lived," according to the author, not a recommendation for conduct.

"Youth in the past has frequently been called wild, or flaming, or what you will," Kerouac said. "In the 1940's, when I was in my twenties, the term 'beat' seemed to apply to me and the people I knew. But we were individualists compared to the wolf-packs of today.

"There is no relation between the pranks of that lonesome, talkative beat generation of the '40's and the concerted desecrations of this new delinquency-hounded generation of the '50's," he added.

Kerouac feels no sense of leadership toward those groups of young Bohemians in New York and San Francisco who have been identified with his beat generation term.

Nohting In Common

"The so-called 'beatniks' of San Francisco wouldn't even talk to me when I was wailing there in the late '40's," he says.

"Why, those guys who picketed the Giants coming to San Francisco in the name of the beat generation don't realize that I used to be a center fielder for the Boston Braves in my dreams. When I was in high school, I used to be like DiMaggio after deep or short flyballs. I was a wrist hitter, 14 home runs in 10 games. I even had a try out with the Woonsocket Sputniks, or somebody."

A lover of rock 'n' roll music which he plays on the radio "every day" at the newly-purchased old house where he lives with his mother and two cats outside New York City, Kerouac mentioned the recent rock 'n' roll riot in Boston.

"Blaming juvenile delinquency on my books is about like blaming the Boston rioting on the music," he said.

"There is no relation between rock 'n' roll, which is very beautiful oral jazz if you'll listen, and the handful of hoodlums who give it a bad name—as though love song ever spelled footpad."

The author says he is no expert on juvenile crime and does not like to see law-breaking any more than the next man.

In The Dar..

"I'm as completely in the dark about all this new cruel gangingup business as you or Freud or anyone else," he said.

"There have always been the criminally insane and whether they blame their actions on alcohol, heroin, possession by the devil, marijuana or 'heatness,' the fact still remains that they are criminally insane, young or old."

Kerouac, who is deeply interested in Buddhism, indicated that his forthcoming literary efforts will move on from the beat generation "hipster" characters that brought him to public attention.

"In my new novel, 'Dharma Bums,' which is coming out this fall, there isn't even one sentimental hubcap stolen," he said with a chuckle. "It's really a book about religious vagrants — young guys wandering around smiling, with rucksacks on their backs, drinking wine in the moonlight like Li Po, the Chinese Poet, climbing mountains to pray for the final safety of all living beings. Why? What more decent activity?"

HELICOPTERS

Ugly Ducklings Of Air Becoming Big Business

By WES COOK

The clownish helicopter, an ugly duckling among its sylph-like sisters of the air, is rapidly becoming big business.

Helicopter sales have more than doubled in the past three years. The machine is extremely versatile: It can be used to deliver mail, cargo and passengers, adapted for crop dusting, surveying, patroling pipelines and national forests, rounding up cattle, and as a police aid in traffic control.

'Copter shuttle services for air travelers and suburban commuters in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles carried more than 150,000 passengers last year. That was more than twice the figure for 1956.

The Korean War proved the value of the whirlybirds for rescue and supply work, and the military services are still the biggest helicopter users, operating some 3,500. Industry reports show there are 99 commercial helicopter operators flying about 450 machines in North America. At least eight companies are producing helicopters for civil and military use.

Raymond Sawyer, executive director of the U. S. Civil Aeronautics Board, says the greatest need for the helicopter in commercial aviation is to provide comfortable, efficient and fast transportation between airports and midtown or suburban heliports. He has told the Helicopter Assn. of America:

"The air traveler is not going to be satisfied, after flying from coast to coast in four hours, to spend an hour or longer fighting surface traffic from the airport to the city."

New York Airways, Chicago Helicopter Airways and Los Angeles Airways are doing their best to meet this need. They operate 26 aircraft, serving 24 communities. Both the New York and Los Angeles carriers are adding new 15 - passenger rotary - wing machines to their schedules this year.

As an example of the time this service saves, Los Angeles Airways says a man driving from Santa Ana to catch a 7 a.m. plane at Los Angeles airport would have to get up at 3 a. m; if he used the helicopter service, he could sleep till 5 a. m.

A study by the New York Port Authority predicted that by 1970 five million persons would enter or leave the Manhattan area by helicopter every year. Chicago and Los Angeles expect a comparable number of passengers by that time.

Charter helicopter operators also are enjoying a rapid development. One firm in the San Francisco area operates about 60 rotary-wing aircraft and reported a 1956 income of two million dollars, compared to only $7,000 in 1947.

While the helicopter industry is making giant strides it still must untangle a number of serious problems.

The Helicopter Council of the Aviation Industries Assn. says many proposed helicopter developments have been seriously retarded because of state aeronautical laws which apply only to fixed wing aircraft. Enactment of new laws takes time.

The helicopter lines must receive prior approval from the Civil Aeronautics Administration for proposed routes, approach zones, emergency landing areas and heliport locations. Approval also must come from affected municipalities.

City officials and residents of areas where helicopter service has been proposed often are apprehensive. They are concerned for their safety, comfort and the effect of helicopter operations on property values.

Other problems include the high operating cost of the 'copter and its limited usefulness under certain weather conditions. However, these are problems the industry believes can be solved in time.

Robert L. Cummins Jr., president of New York Airways, says that by late 1960 multiengine jet powered helicopters will be ca - ing 20 to 25 passengers over a distance of about 125 miles.

Beyond that, the experimental vertical take off and landing fixed wing aircraft that would provide speeds equal to today's airliners.

A special committee of the Air League of the British Empire said it is satisfied that a plane that could cross the Atlantic in two to three hours and take off and land vertically "is a practical proposition within the next 12 years."

Writer Sees Into Heart Of Tornado

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—"I looked up and to my astonishment I saw right into the heart of the tornado."

"There was a circular opening in the center of the funnel. The walls of this opening were rotating clouds and the whole was brilliantly lighted with constant flashes of lightning which zig-zagged from side to side."

A lucky eyewitness wrote this description of a Kansas tornado 30 years ago. It made him one of the exclusive few who have ever peered up into a tornado, and lived to tell about it. He was all right because the funnel was well above the ground, and couldn't vacuum-clean him up into the air to injury or death inside its savage writhings.

He saw lightning inside. Other people who have seen inside a funnel, or have been close to tornadoes, tell of seeing lightning, or balls of fire, or luminous clouds, or St. Elmo's fire.

The point is—all saw tremendous electrical activity.

Tornadoes are perhaps terrific electric winds, created by lightning and the electricity in thunderstorms, so that the thunderstorm becomes a tornado. The electric heating of the air could produce the winds whirling at 300 to 500 m. p. h.

This electrical theory of tornadoes — championed more than a century ago but then abandoned—is being revived by Dr. Bernard Vonnegut, a physicist prominent in weather science, of Arthur D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.

He surveyed many past published eyewitness accounts.

Now—to prove or disprove the theory—Dr. Vonnegut would like to hear from other witnesses of tornadoes, particularly as to whether they saw any signs of electrical activity.

Being close to a tornado, Dr. Vonnegut grants, is not conducive to making careful, scientific observations, but he'd still welcome letters about what people see.

Dr. Vonnegut is well-known for his finding that silver iodide smoke can be used as seeds in rainmaking experiments. His main research interest now is meteorology, the science of weather.

Dr. Vonnegut disagrees with theories that falling raindrops produce the electricity in clouds and lightning.

Instead, he thinks the electricity can well come first, and probably even helps produce the rain. He's testing this idea by experiments on clouds, and in the laboratory.

Clouds could become electrified, he explains, because moist, warm air rises up, and carries along positive electrical charges that normally exist near the ground.

The positive charges in the cloud then attract a current of small electric charges or ions from the ionosphere, and these negative charges attach themselves to particles of moisture on the outside of the cloud.

Downdrafts carry the negative charges to lower levels. More positive charges are attracted up from the earth, and are carried to the top of the cloud.

The difference between electrical fields increases. The strong electrical field makes cloud droplets coalesce and fall earthward as rain. If the conviction current — or up-and-down movement of the air — continues, the electric field gets still stronger and produces lightning.

Recent radar, balloon and other measurements indicate that this could be the real mechanism, for they show that electrification begins before there is any detectable rain in the cloud, Dr. Vonnegut says.

There is no question but that some electrical storms can produce more electrical energy than all the dynamos in the United States, he continues.

Eyewitnesses right under or fairly near tornadoes tell — in addition to electrical action — of hearing sounds like millions of bees, or smelling ozone odors like those from high-voltage wires, of hearing continuous radio static—and other signs of electrical activity.

Certainly there has to be some source of energy capable of creating the tornadic winds. This energy could be electrical, like that in a violent thunderstorm.

Repeated lighting strokes, several a second along the same path, could heat a cylisder of air enough to start intense convection or whirling movement. Or the highly charged air might be speeded up by a strong electrical field, Dr. Vonnegut says.

The lightning could form a chimney of very hot air within a cloud. This would rise rapidly, pulling new air behind it, and into the chimney so that the air rotates.

With this rotation under way, air outside the vortex could be prevented from entering by the strong centrifugal force of the rotation. So air could only be sucked up through the bottom of the funnel. The hollow tube could finally grow until it touched the ground, sweeping along like a giant vacuum-cleaner hose over everything it touched.

Four Trucks Speed Away On Mission

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early each morning, when Congress is in session, four trucks speed away from the Government Printing Office on an unusual mission.

Their job is to hand-deliver copies of the Congressional Record to 185 senators and representatives living in the District of Columbia who have requested this special service.

If Congress has been mercifully shortwinded the day before, the record may be delivered as early as 4 a.m. If the statesmen have been under full sail, it may be as late as 7 o'clock.

Push A Button War Near

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The ability to push a button and launch a long-range guided missile is nearing reality for the United States.

Whether pushbutton warfare which implies an all-out thermonuclear holocaust, will ever be practiced is another question. But the need for a pushbutton deterrent capability is something on which the nation's defense strategists agree.

Little noticed at the time, a terse Navy announcement June 24 indicated a major breakthrough in the development of a 1,500-mile range, guided ballistic missile which can be factory-packed with solid fuels and shipped ready to fire at the push of a button.

The Navy announcement concerned a 25-second test of its intermediate range ballistic missile, the Polaris, designed to be launched from a submarine.

The Navy said the Polaris test vehicle "was directed to follow a flight path involving abrupt upward and downward pitches. It also was directed to yaw (veer) from its original heading."

The Polaris was launched vertically. Its pre-set inertial guidance system then ordered it to assume an angle of 76 degrees. Four seconds later it was ordered to resume vertical flight. The missile performed this maneuver four times.

There was a similar successful guidance test June 4. On May 8 a Polaris test proved that the fires in the thrust chamber could be controlled, that is extinguished upon command.

The significance of these tests is that means have been found of guiding a solid fuel propelled missile in flight and of governing its range.

In the past solid fuel ballistic missiles were launched like artillery shells and flew in a straight line until the fuel was exhausted. Range was governed by the angle of firing.

The key advantage of a Polaris-type solid fuel missile is its continual readiness for immediate firing. Until now all long-range ballistic missiles Air Force or Army, have used liquid propellants, including oxygen, which have to be fed into the engine at the last moment for maximum performance.

Even the Army's 500-mile Redstone, the closest thing the United States has to an operational long-range ballistic missile requires one to three hours to fuel and check. Sometimes the check takes as long as 48 hours because of the complicated internal tubing. There is no tubing in a solid fuel missile such as the Polaris.

The Army, which did some of the preliminary work on the Polaris, is now working on a similar solid-propelled missile, the Pershing, to replace the Redstone.

To some extent, a push button ability already exists in antiaircraft defenses. For example, there is the Army's Nike-Ajax soon to be replaced by the improved Nike-Hercules.

Both the Ajax and the Hercules are ground-controlled by radio and directed toward their targets by radar. Both use solid propellants. A touch of a button and they are off.

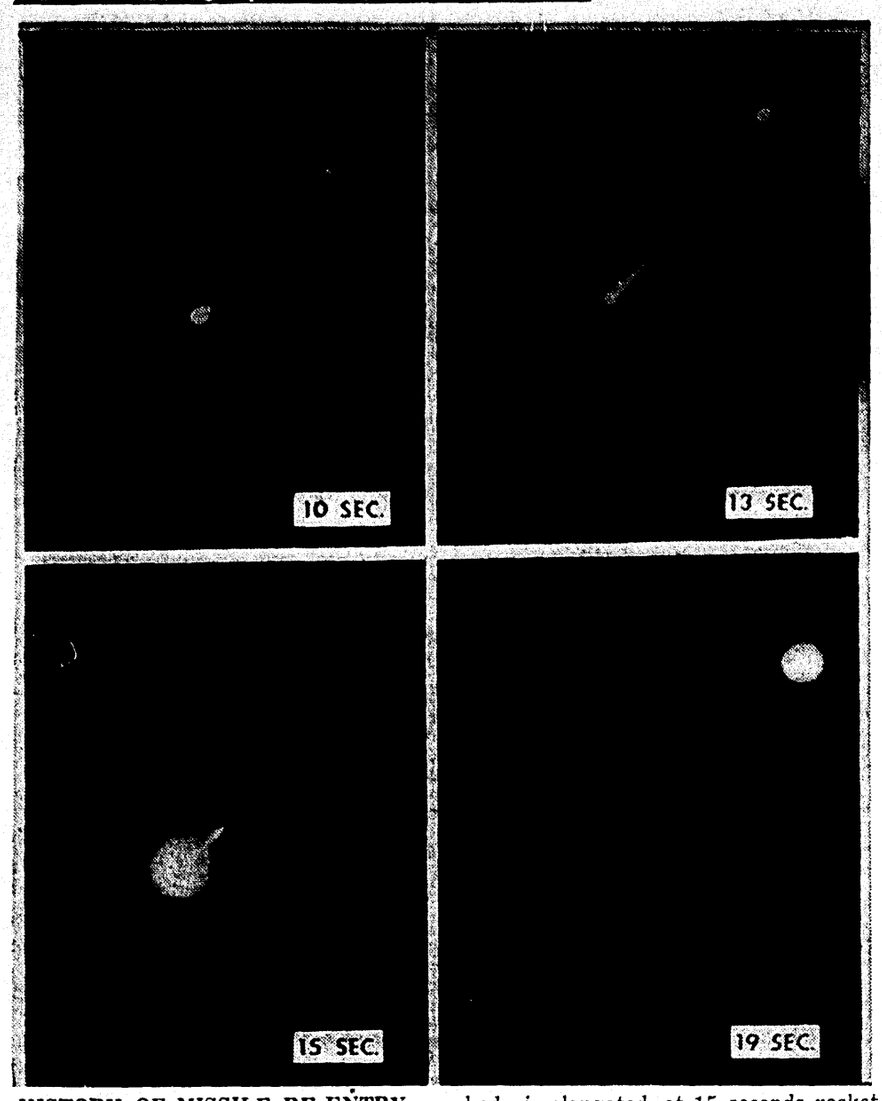
Now in the works is the Nike-Zeus program of the Army. It is designed to stop incoming enemy missiles. The problems are fantastic.

It is assumed that an enemy missile will be detected 60 miles up and 300 miles away from the target traveling at 22 times the speed of sound.

To make matters more difficult, it is assumed the missile is accompanied by up to 50 decoys which have the size and shape of the real thing.

For the Army the problem boils downs to inventing an integrated detection launching system which will react automatically within 60 seconds, pick out the real missile and intercept it.

The nation, in brief, is developing missiles of intermediate and intercontinental ranges, plus anti-missile missiles just-in-case. If we ever need them for all-out retaliation or protection, they'll be on tap.



HISTORY OF MISSILE RE-ENTRY—Photos trace re-entry of Jupiter IRBM (Intermediate Range Ballistic Missile) into earth's atmosphere in May 18 launching from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Times given are elapsed time after missile became visible. Rocket body (larger image) and instrument package are seen at 10 seconds. At 13 seconds, nose cone (tiny image lower left) is visible and rocket body is elongated, at 15 seconds rocket body flares up as instrument package disintegrates, and at 19 seconds, instrument package (not in photo) has completely burned out and distance between nose cone and rocket body increases rapidly. Glowing objects were visible for about 24 seconds. Nose cone was recovered in Atlantic. (AP Wirephoto)

Nixon Said Using Party Unity Theme

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon was reported Saturday to be hammering on a party unity theme in talks to California Republicans preparing for the 1958 election campaign.

He was understood to be arguing that achievement of unity was an indispensable ingredient in any comeback from the poor showing made by the GOP in California primary voting last month.

As a Californian and prospective presidential nominee in 1960, Nixon has a stake in saving his politically important home state for his party in the Nov. 4 election.

According to a well-posted California source here, Nixon will address Republican fund-raising dinners at San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego early in September and make another swing through the state when the campaign approaches its climax late in October.

Republican planners hope the Nixon kickoff will revive morale which has slipped because of party rifts and the show of weakness in the primary.

The California GOP was split largely by maneuvers which led to pushing Gov. Goodwin J. Knight into the senatorial race to clear the track for Sen. William F Knowland to run for governor.

The unity pressure is expected by some Republicans to lead to a truce between Knowland and Knight and draw them closer together for the campaign. According to reports here, however, they are still feuding, currently over the choice of a new party chairman to be named at a GOP huddle at Sacramento early next month.

There appears to be no chance of unity on the right-to-work issue — a hot one in California. Knowland favors and Knight opposes the initiative proposal on the ballot for a state right-to-work law. Knowland's position has united labor leaders in opposition to him.

Some highly placed Republicans believe Nixon will declare himself neutral on the issue.

Compares Ike To Figurehead In Government

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) charged Saturday night that President Eisenhower "is little more than a ceremonial chief of state" whose administration has plagued the American people with "drifting and indecision."

In a speech prepared for delivery before a Democratic fund raising dinner, Symington charged that the Republicans continue to "softly cushion" the American people from the facts despite the "lessons of Suez and Sputnik."

"The role of the Democratic Party in this crisis of confidence is to see to it that the people know the facts," he added.

Symington predicted that the next Congress will have the largest Democratic majority in 20 years and "our party will have the people's mandate to press for policy decisions which the present administration will find it very difficult to ignore."

Ouachita Fair Slated Despite Loss Of Funds

The Ouachita Valley Fair in West Monroe will go on as scheduled October 6, even though it, along with many other expositions in the area, was denied state funds when Governor Earl Long vetoed an appropriation measure last week.

This announcement was made here yesterday by John Birdsong, secretary - manager of the fair.

"The only thing the loss of appropriation will make us do, I think, is to make us work harder and have a better fair than ever," he said.

"It might curtail our premiums somewhat. All of that money would have been used for premiums, but we'll find money somewhere else to pay premiums," he added.

State assistance for the valley fair has been running around $3,000 a year. "We've used it 100 per cent for premiums, not for operating expense or for any other purpose than premiums. This will be the first year since beginning in 1932 when we haven't received some state money," said Birdsong.

Completed

All of the contract commitments for the fair and the catalogs listing premiums are completed, and plans will go along as usual in this respect, said the manager.

"In the past we have kept the fair on a pay as you go basis. This year we'll sell more commercial booth space and use other means to help supplement the loss. We may have to raise the admission prices a little. I don't know what we'll do, but we will work out something to offset the appropriation loss," Birdsong continued.

He added that he was not taking issue with any of the lawmakers. He praised the parish legislative delegation for its work in the session just ended.

Solon Sounds Warning About Silence Issue

WASHINGTON AP)—Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark) made clear Saturday his Senate Rackets Committee will meet head-on any attempt by Chicago gangsters to frighten subpoenaed witnesses into silence.

McClellan summoned two Chicagoans to tell in public about what he has called moves by hoodlums to silence them, and to say what it was the underworld wanted them to conceal.

The committee will resume Tuesday its hearings on alleged extortion and murder in Chicago labor rackets, and shift in following weeks to conditions in other cities.

It has heard testimony that a crime syndicate ruled by Chicago gangster Tony Accardo has been reaping rich profits by preying on the restaurant industry there. Witnesses swore that Accardo mobsters were muscling into restaurant ownership, into labor unions with which the restaurants bargain, and selling protection from labor troubles to Chicago eating places.

Accardo invoked the Fifth Amendment on all questions about the situation.

AS THEY COME DOWN TO THE LAST CHUKKER, THE SCORE IS STILL TIED—AND THE PLAY IS INTENSE

SHE FOULED ME!
SORRY, SON. I DIDN'T SEE IT!
WHY DON'T YOU SEND FOR THE CHAPLAIN?

SO YOU HAD TO YELL 'COPPER', HUH?
HE ALSO DIDN'T SEE WHAT YOU DID T'SCOOTER

UNABLE TO CONTROL HIS TEMPER, MOOF RAISES HIS STICK AS IF TO HIT POTEET AS HE DID SCOOTER

THE CALDRON CAPTAIN SEES IT COMING AND SWINGS HIS OWN MALLET… IT CATCHES MOOF'S, AND THE WRIST STRAP HOLDS AS THE PLATEAU PLAYER IS SNAPPED FROM THE SADDLE…

MOOF SCRAMBLES TO HIS FEET, UNHURT, AND THE GAME GOES ON AS HE RUNS TOWARD HIS PONY…

AND BOUNDS BETWEEN THE POLES FOR A GOAL!

BUT THE GIRL ON THE HOSPITAL BED DOESN'T HEAR THE NEWS…
